One Will Have County Board

For the Next Thirty Days-The Other Is Fined $20 and Costs-Terse Tales of the Metropolis.

There was a sensational trial in Justice Fisher's court yesterday afternoon which showed up some of the immorality of Red Jacket. When it became known that liams paints, also all colors in oil and Mrs. F. Haun and Mrs B. Flannigan had St. Louis red seal lead. been arrested the court room was cruwded during the trial. The pair were arrested by Officer Murphy on complaint of Charles Lind, of Allouez. When brought before the justice Mrs. Flannigan gave ber maiden name as Della Warden and pleaded not guilty. Mrs. Haun also pleaded not guilty and both demanded jury trials separately. Mrs. Flannigan, or Della Warden's, trial came off yesterday afternoon, when she was found guilty and given the full extent of the law. Mrs. Haun appeared before the justice this morning, pleaded guilty, paid a fine of $20 and costs and was discharged.

During the progress of the trial yesterday some sentational testimony was innesses it seems that Lind and his brother came up from Allouez Monday and went to a "candy" store on Sixth street. Here they made arrangements to meet the two defendants in the famous rock building on the same street. The men went there shortly after noon and the two women followed.

The four remained in the building until late that night. About 11 o'clock Lind found that $10 of his cash was missing and immediately went for an officer. He soon f und Nightwatchman Murphy and early the next morning the two women were arrested under the village ordinance.

The jury found Mrs. Flannigan guilty and the justice imposed a fine of $20 and costs, amounting to $31 in all, or thirty days in the county jail. Some of her friends were looking for the money to pay the fine, but could not get it and she was taken to Houghton at noon, where she will spend the next month in the county iail.

The proprietor of the rock building was arrested this morning for keeping a resort. He pleaded not guilty before Justice Fisher and will be tried this after-

Card of Thanks

To all those who by their many acts of kindness and sympathy helped me a king in the attitude of adoration or pass through the sad bereavement in the death of my husband, I offer my most sincere and heartfelt thanks, not forget ting those who by their attendance at the funeral service showed so much respect to the memory of my dear husband. To the Suomi society, who had charge of the funeral, and to those who sent the beautiful floral offerings, are my thanks especially due. I shall never forget the kind and friendly acts.

Mrs. F. Koskitalo.

Mr. J. S. Dymock has received word of the death of Michael Cronley at Kilbeggan, Westmeath county, Ireland, on the 17th of last month. The deceased will be remembered here by his quaint characteristics. He left here two years ago in June and has since been in his old home in the Emerald Isle. The deceased was one of the oldest settlers in the copper country, coming to Eagle River some forty years ago. He resided here twentyfive years.

BRONZES OF OLL BABYLON.

Casts of Figures Made Four Thousand Years Ago.

There have been placed on exhibition in the Babylonian room of the British museum some very fine specimens of Babylonian bronze castings. These interesting specimens of early metal work come from a place known to the ancients as Sir-pur-ra, or Lagash, the modern name of which is Tell-lo, a large mound or site in southern Chaldea. One of the bronzes shows the king of Babylonia, who appears clean shaven, in the dress of the high priest. The garment reaches down to the feet and is crossed over the left shoulder, leaving the right arm, which is raised, bare. The statuette is a full length one, standing on its own double plinth, and is some 12 inches high. This bronze comes from Abu Rabbab and dates about B C. 2200 A second statuette represents plation bacing his hands raised and clasped together in a similar manner as the god Nebo is represented. The king wears a long, flowing beard but no costume can be traced. This figure is not full length, being cut off about the calves, and represents probably the Chaldean king, Gudea, B C. 2500 The third figure, which stands seven inches high, represents Camil-Sin, king of Babylonia, in the character of a basket bearer, both arms being uplifted and supporting a basket borne on the head. The date of the figure is about B C 3200. It is supposed that these statuettes may have been dedications to Ningirsu. the fire god, whose worship was a particular cult at Tell-lo.

The art of making bronze casts was known to the Babylonians from very early times, and many examples are to be seen in the British museum as well as in the Louvre. A plaster cast of a Babylonian queen, taken from the original in the Louvre, stands by the side of the new additions, casts of which have been sent to the French museum. -London Graphic.

ONLY A LITTLE WORLD, THIS.

Melancholy Reflections of the Young Man From Sank Bridge.

"What a small world it is, after all! said the young man from Sauk Bridge, O. He had just moved to Chicago, and for some reason he was not greatly impressed with the immensity of the city.

"For instance," he went on, "I had been in my hotel but a week when I discovered that my uncle's divorced wife lived in the next room, while the man who married a girl I used to be engaged to is on the floor below. More than that, the greatest bore I ever knew in my life, a creature who has haunted me ever since my school days, keeps a big boarding house in the next building. I have to dodge him every time I go down town. At 4 o'clock this morning, when I thought of all times I should certainly be alone, I started to walk down State street. It was a misty morning, and the gray fog hid even the one or two all night cabmen who were still sticking to their stands. The street was lonely and deserted. I had walked slowly along down to Jackson street without meeting a human being, when suddenly out of

" 'Hello, there!' sounded a voice as we drow close together. 'I haven't seen you for a long time. I'm in pretty tough luck, old man. Can't you stake me to a bed? "It was a tramp printer I had known eight years ago in Leadville, Colo. I gave him 50 cents simply because he had proved to me beyond cavil that life

TOBY AND THE BEAR.

A MANEUVER OVER WHICH THE WISE OLD NATIVES DIFFERED

Toby Was the Smartest Bear Dog In All the Woods and His Owner Wouldn't Have Sold Him For $100, but He Wasn't Cut Out For an Acrobat.

"I had a dog named Toby when I was living up in the Pennsylvania lumber woods, " said George W. Reynolds of the National Lumber company "He was a bear dog Bears, as every one knows who ever lived among them, hate dogs beyond everything else, two legged or four legged, and will frequently give up a good chance to escape from a pursuing hunter just for the satisfaction of waiting for the dog that is yelping behind him and taking a fall out of him when he comes up, a fall that usually ends the dog's career, especially if it is a dog not especially trained to hunt the

"This dog Toby of mine was famous all through these woods. He was acknowledged to be the most accomplished dog when it came to getting the best of bear that had ever been in that country, and if any hunter didn't catch a bear when Toby was along it wasn't the dog's fault. Once Toby was borrowed by a man named Crowley, who knew where a couple of bears were hanging out The dog routed them out and drove them plumb to Crowley, who could easily have shot them both, but instead. when he saw them coming, he cut and ran Tim Bull, who had gone along with Crowley on the hunt, said that Toby just stood still and gazed in amaze ment after the flying bunter. Crowley, seeing that the bears had got away, soon came back. The dog showed his opinion of Crowley by bristling up and growling savagely and threateningly at him for a few seconds. Then he quit and went home. Ever after that Toby would snap and growl at Crowley whenever he saw him.

"One day I was looking over a logging job I had contracted for and discovered signs of bear along the creek. Next day Toby and I went out to see what we could do with the bear. We soon struck the trail, and Toby located the bear in a small patch of laurels, from which he soon routed bruin He brought the bear to bay in a little open space in a piece of chestnut timber. There was no necessity of the bear turning at bay, but he evidently wanted to get a whack at Toby. I could have easily sent a bullet through the bear, but having the utmost confider in Toby's smartness, and seeing ' .. the bear was anxious to put his thattness against the dog's, I concluded to let him have the chance and to enjoy the sport of a few minutes' maneuvering between the two.

"It w a fun. Toby worried the already try old chap with tricks and quick a vements until the bear was wild we rage. Do what he might, he couldn _et a blow or a bite in on Toby, while Toby got a nip at the bear at almost every turn. This amusing dance lasted for ten minutes, and I felt so proud of my dog that I declared there and then that it would take a good deal more than a $100 bill to buy him

"Some wise old natives of those woods assured me afterward that what this bear finally did was a premeditated act, deliberately and successfully carried out as planned. Others declared that it was an afterthought of the bear's. I myself held and hold yet that it was entirely an accident, because I will not admit that there ever was a bear smart enough to get the better of Toby by design.

After sparring and rushing fruitlessly at the dog for ten minutes the bear put his back against a tree and breathed hard for at least a minute. Then it suddenly dropped to all fours and hurried toward another tree a rod or so away Toby followed, and as the bear started to climb the tree seized it by one of its hams. Although the dog must have set his teeth deep in the flesh, the bear did not stop on his way, but climbed on as if nothing was worrying him. The dog held on and was lifted from the ground as the bear climbed. The higher the bear went the tighter Toby appeared to hang on to its rear, and presently he was swinging in the air 15 feet from the ground. "The sight was so funny that I just tumbled on the ground and roared. The bear stopped when about 15 feet up the trunk of the tree, clung there for a moment, and then let loose. He came down like a pile driver. When he struck at the bottom of the tree, Toby was between him and the ground. There was a faint yelp, and that was all. Three hundred pounds of bear had flattened 40 pounds of dog out of all kind of shape. The catastrophe was so sudden and unexpected that before I could recover from the painful surprise it gave me the bear had disappeared in the laurels. There never was a smarter bear dog than Toby, but he wasn't cut out for an acrobat. There is where he made his mistake. There never was a smarter dog than Toby, nor was there ever a deader one when that bear got off of him."-New York Sun

Mrs. Huntington's Baths. Mrs. C. P. Hantington recently got a new maid. She instructed her about the arrangement of her bath. "You will prepare my bath every morning and every night," she began. "Mon Dieu!" exclaimed the new maid, "two baths a day! Why, my last lady took one in a week, and the little children only took one a week too." "Poor little wretches!" exclaimed the new mistress. And she tells the story in the same spirit, but she does not tell whom her maid lived with before she got her. The two baths a day are supposed to have an effect in keeping down her flesh -Philadelphia

All In the Family.

A few nights ago a prominent Evansenian, who lives in a Landsome home in Lake street, was working overtime on the North Side, and when his business was completed boarded a North Shere electric car for home. He was enjoying the last of his box of Havamas and was contemplating how much the next bex would cost when the conductor came out on the front platform for fares. The thoughtful man jammed his hands into his pockets, and in his dismay discovered that he had only a counterfeit dollar, which he had been carrying for months. Ten miles from home, away from friends and broke was the uppleasant thought that flashed through his mind, so he passed up the counterfeit coin and received his change Before the ear had traveled a mile the conductor carrie around again with a suspicious look on his face and said, 'Either you er a lady inside gave me a counterfeit dellar." "It was the verman, of course," responded the embaranced gentleman. They are always doing such things." The remainder of the journey was not very pleasent to the man who was 'beating' his ride at the expense of an innocent woman, but he buried himself in thought and tried to forget. He left the car at Lake street and had started home on a brisk walk, when he heard footsteps behind him. Turning, he saw his wife, who rashed up and in the most mortified tones said: "How I wish I had known you were on that car! The conductor accused me of giving him a counterfeit dellar and made me give him a new dollar before all those people."-Chicago Times Herald.
