Old Ab Drake.

Old Ab Drake was one of the "odd sticks" that flourished in a Vermont rural neighborhood a good many years ago. His wife was a meek, obedient, spiritless woman, over whom Ab tyrannized for 50 years, when she quietly slipped out of this world. Old Ab's panegyrics on his dead wife's virtues were loud and long. Before the funeral he said to one of his neighbors: "She was the best woman on the top of this earth. I jess thought the world and all of her—yes, I did! I always thought it, and hanged if there wan't times when I come mighty near telling her so—yes, sir! And I would 'a' told her so, only I've always held, and I still hold, that it ain't safe to praise anything that wares petticoats. 'Coptin for that, I would 'a' told 'Lay Ellen what I thought of her many a time—yes, I would!'—Boston Journal.

The Teuton is apparently abandoning the pipe and cigar in favor of becoming a cigarette fiend. In 1892 Germany manufactured 150,000,000 cigarettes.
In 1895 the figure reached 600,000,000, which were doubled in 1897. Dealers do not complain, as cigarettes are more profitable than cigars.—Special Cable to New York Sun.

HIS FAMILY LINEAGE

MISS CRAIG LEARNS THE PRESIDENT'S ANCESTRY FROM TOMBSTONES.

She Gave Him a Horseshoe and a Piece of Peat From the Old Homestead—The President's Grandfather, Not His Grandfather, Executed as a Patriot.

A young woman arrived from Ireland a few days ago and called on President Mc-Kinley to present to him the genealogical tree of the McKinnys of Connagar, from which family the president is descended. She also gave to him an old horseshoe and a piece of peat from the old McKinley homestead.

The young woman is Miss Martha Craig.
She comes to America to tell Americans the picturesqueness of Ireland and the habits of the Irish people.

It was by mere chance that she ran across the history of President McKinley's ancestors. Always interested in America, she had learned the name of McKinley when he was elected president. About 18 months ago Miss Craig took a trip through Ireland. While passing through Connagar she was attracted to an old graveyard.
While examining the gravestones she saw the name McKinley.

Miss Craig discovered that a large family of McKinnys had once lived on a farm near the graveyard. So interested did she become in her genealogical research that she went into it very deeply, and when she arrived in America a few days ago she had a family tree of the president.

Miss Craig knew no one in the United States, but she had been born near Connagar, and so had the president's forefathers.
This at least gave her the license to speak with him, and the other day she managed to get an audience with the president. Mr. McKinley became most interested in Miss Craig and told her he was much pleased to have his family tree so thoroughly established.

The McKinnys of Connagar appear to have been respectable farmers, Presbyterians in religion. In the ancient but neglected burying ground of Derrykelghan their history is found. How long they were on the Connagar farm prior to the rebellion in 1798 cannot be determined.
In that year one of the foremost revolutionists was Francis McKinley. Becoming suspected of complicity in the proceedings of the United Irishmen, he was arrested on the information of an intimate acquaintance named Smith, taken to Colraine, tried and hanged.

Before his execution he repeated portions of Psalms six, which contains such improvements on the "lying tongue" that accuses falsely. Francis McKinley's wife obtained his body the night after his execution, and it is now buried at Derry-kelghan.

The McKinnys put a stone over the grave. Exact copies of the inscriptions on the McKinley headstones have been obtained by Miss Craig. One, which was erected by the wife of Francis McKinley, bears the following:

"Here lie the remains of Francis Mc-Kinley, who departed this life on the 7th of July, 1798, aged forty-two years."

The inscription of the other stone reads:
"Here lieth the body of Francis McKinley, late of Connagar, who departed this life June 24, 1798, aged forty-two years; also the body of his daughter Elizabeth, who departed this life March 31, 1803, aged six years; also his wife, Anna Mc-Kinley, who departed this life April, 1810."

What seems strange on reading the above is that the stones assign different dates for McKinley's death. A reference to an old Columbian directory does not help out of this difficulty. Francis McKinley married Anna Hill of Alterranan, near Ballycastle.
Two sons and five daughters were born to him. John lived on the farm until grown and then came to America to join an uncle who had come to this country several years before. The name of this uncle is not given, but he was the father of William McKinley, the president's father.
Francis, the second son, then came into possession of the farm and held it until 1818, when he sold it and followed his brother to this country. He was the last of the McKinnys in Connagar. After the farm was sold by him it passed through many hands, but recently came into possession of Captain R. J. Montgomery of the British army.

It has generally been thought that President McKinley is the grandson of Francis McKinley, who was hanged. Miss Craig's investigation proves that this could not have been the case and that the uncle of Francis McKinley, who came to America before any of the other McKinnys had left Ireland, was the grandfather of the president. This will be seen to be correct when it is borne in mind that Francis McKinley had but two sons, John and Francis, whereas the father of the president was named William.

While at the old McKinley farm Miss Craig took many photographs, the first ever taken of the historic old place. These she is now having developed and will present the president with a set of them.—

HORRORS IN THE SEA.

Diver Morgan's Story of the Dead Men Pinioned in the Maine.

Every diver who tries to find out what is left of the Maine in the mud of Havana harbor adds to the tale of horror and misery on the night of the explosion. Charles Morgan, who, with four other divers from the battleship Iowa, cruiser New York and coast survey department and one from the Merritt Coast Wrecking company, has been trying to solve the mystery of the Maine, says that his vocabulary is not equal to the emergency. He said recently:
"I have looked over what is left of the Maine pretty thoroughly. I found bodies burned and disfigured beyond recognition.
Heaps of wreckage are piled up on them.
Nearly all of them had clutched something in their dying agony. One or two must have grasped something that burned the palms of their hands completely away. In all my experience as a diver I never saw anything like this."

A West Virginia Pike.

Mr. David Wilfong of Top Alleghany, W. Va., while out hunting recently on the north fork of the Greenbrier river, saw what he thought was an opossum swimming in a shallow place. In the river, but on shooting and rescuing his game it proved to be a pike, which weighed 63 pounds. Mr. James Hevener, who recently returned from West Virginia, brought the head of the fish with him, and it is now in the possession of Mr. Lynn Sullenberger.—Highland (W. Va.) Recorder.

Africa's Golden Lining.

South Africa's annual gold production has reached $60,000,000, and in a few years is expected to go up to $100,000,000.
The new century will open with a golden lining.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Texas Girl.

Chivalry used to be described as a southern virtue, and though we do not wish to imply that the men of the north are unchivalrous it is quite possible that in the south women are still regarded with a greater degree of formal reverence than elsewhere. A native of Texas describes with enthusiasm the women of his state and shows why they cannot fail to excite admiration. "They are," he declares, "sweet, polite, gracious and courageous; they do not curse or swear; they do not use slang, and are not drunkards. Most of them ride well on horseback and can use the six shooter, but do not want to take away a man's job or position." Could a more engaging picture be drawn? These lovely compounds of sweetness and strength know their power, but do not abuse it.
They may resent injury in the most effective fashion, but they are not mean.
They will hesitate before shooting a man who has a family dependent upon him. They are no mere amazons. The fact that they do not curse and swear shows that they possess also the gentler domestic virtues. Those who are in search of the ideal girl should purchase a ticket for Texas.—Providence Journal.

The Odor of the Opera.

The confirmed opera goer drew a long breath. "That would make me happy if it blew over my grave," he murmured blissfully.

The woman with him looked at him doubtfully. "What's blowing?" she asked unsympathetically.

"It's the perfume," he explained.
"One always gets it when the curtain rises on the second act. The house is full by that time and the odors of the flowers and perfumes have grown heavy. The air is close and oppressive during the entr'acte, but when the curtain goes up the draft sweeps out and catches that indescribable odor and whirls it up here to the dress circle.
It's not like anything else. No theater has it. It's the essence of opera flowers and laces and jewels and beauty and music. I'd recognize a whiff of it in paradise. Just ask any old chap who has been coming here for years about it. He'll know what I mean."—New York Sun.

Celebrating His Deliverance.

"Herbert," asked the young wife timidly, "is this the kind of mince pie your mother used to make?"
"No, dear," answered the young husband. "My mother never made mince pies. She was a health reform lecturer." And Herbert helped himself to a second cut.—Chicago Tribune.

Rubbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cets.
