are superior, in that, instead of the goods being merely surrounded with Red Cedar, the flakes are distributed throughout the garments in combination with other insecticides, thus affording the fullest protection.

Red Cedar Flakes may be removed from the garments by a simple brushing, and the slight odor is dissipated by hanging in the sunshine a short time.

MUST REVISE FARE SCHEDULES

PASSENGER RATES MUST BE CHANGED TO CONFORM WITH COMMISSION'S ORDER.

Passenger schedules on practically every railroad in the United States will have to be revised during the next few months in order to make them conform to the changes in the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce act, as amended last summer.

Although the law provided that the section requiring the interstate commerce commission to pass upon all applications for violations of the rule, should not go into effect for six months, the commission has been so busy with the advanced rate cases that it has not yet laid down and general rules. These would indicate how rigidly it is to enforce the rule that no rates for a short distance shall exceed the rates for a longer distance over the same line.

While the railroads have been making plans for the change in their rates for some time, they have not yet discovered in how many cases exceptions will be allowed and the commission's latest order prescribing the time in which the different tariffs must be re-adjusted has caused consternation in the ranks of the men at the head of the rate departments.

To Ask More Time. Claiming that it is a physical impossibility to make all the changes required in the time allowed, a committee of officials representing the Western Passenger association is now planning to go to Washington in a few days to ask for an extension as well as to ascertain the views of the commission as to how many of their tariffs must be changed.

Thousands of passenger as well as freight rates throughout the country are in violation of the law as it now stands, although the commission has issued an order that no rates need be changed for the time being. The greater part of the violations arise from the situation created where long routes meet the competition of shorter lines at prominent junction points but have not reduced their local rates to the competitive basis.

General applications for relief from the application of the law, which may be granted by the commission at its discretion, have already been made, but the commission has served notice that it cannot grant such broad applications and that the rates must be taken up more in detail.

Cites Need of Readjustment. An order just issued by the commission states that the great majority of instances in which the rates violate the law may be removed by a proper readjustment of the tariffs themselves. In this work of revision the commission therefore orders the roads first to readjust their individual local rates, then the joint rates within the defined passenger association territories, and then the inter-territorial joint rates.

Not later than July 1 of this year the carriers must have on file with the commission tariffs of passenger fares between points on their individual lines which observe the rule except insofar as exception has been authorized by specific orders of the commission.

Must Point to Exceptions? In all cases where the roads intend to insist upon charging a fare in disregard of the rule they must file with the commission by April 1 a written statement calling attention to their applications for relief and pointing out the specific fares on which exceptions are desired. This, the roads say, will require a complete check of every tariff in existence, as well as a vast amount of clerical work in preparing the statement, to say nothing of revising the rates themselves.

By Dec. 1 all joint fares within the several passenger association territories must be revised, and on March 1, 1912, all tariffs must have been re-adjusted to conform to the rule. Applications must be filed by May 1 and June 1 respectively.

FORMER U. OF M. STUDENTS ASKED TO USE INFLUENCE

Former students of the University of Michigan who are residing in the copper country have received a letter from President H. B. Hutchins asking that they write to the state senator and representatives, in order that measures seriously affecting the future of the state institution will not be passed. The Regents are asking for a new power, heating and lighting plant as the old plant is entirely worn out. They are also asking for fire protection as there is practically no protection at present. A new science building for the accommodation of the work in botany, zoology, geology, mineralogy, forestry and psychology, is also wanted as the present condition in the old laboratories are thoroughly bad.

The situation is regarded by the authorities of the University as critical. Failure by the legislature to make the appropriations asked at the present session means not only a failure to supply imperative needs, but it means also the continuance of conditions that are interfering seriously with the efficiency of the institution and that are the subjects of unfavorable comment and disparaging comparison in the educational world.

There is an attempt in the present legislature to limit the regular income of the university and by the imposition of prohibitive fees upon foreign students to change the University from a national institution to one that is merely local. The bills are now pending, the passage and enforcement of either of which would speedily make the University of Michigan a local institution of low grade and forever preclude the possibility of future recognition in the educational movements of the west.

HUNGARIANS TO GATHER SUNDAY

WILL CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY OF HUNGARIAN INDEPENDENCE AT THE FORESTERS' HALL.

The five Hungarian societies of Houghton county will gather at Kearsarge on Sunday afternoon to celebrate the anniversary of Hungarian Independence. A fine program has been arranged in honor of this occasion. While the real anniversary of the forming of the Hungarian diet in 1825 falls on March 15, it was decided this year by the copper country Hungarians to celebrate on March 19, as it will be possible to secure a much larger attendance on that day. The societies will meet at Kearsarge at 2 o'clock and will march to the Protestant church of that location where special services will be held. Later the body will adjourn to the Foresters' hall at Wolverine where a program of addresses by prominent members of that nationality and the rendering of Hungarian national airs by the Hungarian military band under the leadership of Joseph Blank, will be features.

The anniversary which is to be celebrated is one dear to every Hungarian and it is expected that a large percentage of the Hungarian population of the county will participate.
