PAYS TRIBUTE TO SULLIVAN

Sport World Won't Find It Easy to Get Able Successor

The man who immortalized the phrase, "No men are necessary, though many may be missed," was nearly right; but he did not know the business of amateur athletics in the United States of America. Had he known, he would have omitted "No men are necessary." For James E. Sullivan was necessary, as time will prove.

There is no man in sight to take his place—and this is no disparagement whatever to the hosts of estimable gentlemen identified with the promotion and government of amateur sport. Their various vocations do not dovetail into the business the way Jim Sullivan did.

The fact that Mr. Sullivan's private business was benefited by the growth of sport has been the theme of many an attack on the man and the honesty of his purpose, but through all these attacks, which have gone on twenty years or more, the sterling character of James E. Sullivan stood out in such bold relief that his belittlers have been told to shame. International honors, heaped upon him by three American presidents, European kings, princes and lesser potentates, further attest the worth of the man, in striking contrast to his detractors.

Let us for a moment dwell upon the business side of Mr. Sullivan's athletic career. Beaver Street Busby, the demon cobbler, admonishes everyone leaving his shop with a new pair of shoes: "Wear them out quickly, for therein lies your good health." To wear 'em out quickly booms Busby's business, but it means a hard lot of walking, with its resultant good health, so that none who wear 'em out quickly begrudge Busby the boom.

And it was the same with James E. Sullivan's business. He was the advertising representative of A. G. Spalding & Brother, and was reported to have been heavily interested financially in the firm. The bigger he made athletics the greater the demand for the wares of Spalding.

But was there ever a greater proof

HOCKEY STARS GET BIG SALARIES CUT.

Hockey salaries in Canada are going down because the sport is not so well patronized. The Wanderers of Montreal have been notified that $600 will be the limit this winter, which means reductions of $100 to $200. An alternative has been offered to the players of a payment to them of 15 per cent of the receipts after all expenses are paid, the club to take 25 per cent.

of the physical welfare of a nation than a brisk demand for the implements and results of sport? There are other houses handling the same line as Spalding, and Sullivan helped them all, for truly he was the boiler that always had a full head of steam on the good ship Sport, and he kept the ship leveled going at full speed. It was, indeed, a peanut brain that begrudged any firm prosperity in athletic goods in view of the obvious benefits to mankind generally from the sports that Sullivan gave his life to boom.

It was for the good of the game that James E. Sullivan had a job and backers who benefited by the time he gave to athletics. Otherwise he would not have been able to give said time, in which case athletics would not be the factor in American life that it is today.

He was a rare friend, an intense enemy, but always scrupulously fair as it was given him to see the right, says the Evening Wisconsin. When some one he had befriended took a shot at him, he was sad at being mistaken in his judgment of mankind. These ingraves never angered him. He was too big a man.

James E. Sullivan inherited the Amateur Athletic Union from Father Bill Curtis, its founder, and he raised it from an unsteady, tottering babe to a great power in the amateur sport of the entire world. Now that he's gone to join Father Bill, we hope the fates have a man in store to keep their heritage whole.

NO CHANGES IN RACING YACHTS

Neither Side Takes Advantage of Conditions imposed by War

New York, Sept. 23.—Though no agreement has been reached that no changes shall be made to the cup yachts during the coming winter, it is certain that no advantage will be taken of the unfortunate postponement to alter materially either of the three defenders or the Shamrock IV., the challenger. The Shamrock IV., is hauled out at Shewan's yard in South Brooklyn, and a shed of corrugated iron has been built over the yacht which completely shuts it from the public gaze and protects it from the weather.

The Resolute is in the shop in which she was built at the Herreshoff yard at Bristol and will remain there until wanted. The Vanitie and Defiance, are hauled out at City Island and carefully covered.

Yachtmen here think that it is only fair that the three defenders should finish out their scrape to determine which is the best boat just as they are at present. They figure that no changes are necessary to the Resolute and that no changing of form could improve her speed. The Vanitie might be improved slightly by taking off her rail and perhaps by cutting off five feet of her after overhang and putting the weight below, and the Defiance might be improved by removing her lead and recasting it so that the weight would be put much lower.

To make these changes, however, they think would not be fair to the challenger, because she is here must be kept practically as she is. It would be just as fair, they argue, for the defenders of the cup to build a new yacht. They would have lots of time to do that and could profit much by what has been learned of the Shamrock IV., but there are few who think that it will be necessary to build a new yacht. They think that the defense of the cup is in safe keeping.

Should Stand Pat—Lipton.

Sir Thomas Lipton is credited with having said he would like the New York Yacht club to select the defender now and then keep the Shamrock IV., and the defender as they are until the time comes for them to race. There is one strong objection, however, to this plan, according to a member of the cup committee.

When the terms to govern the races were drawn up it was agreed by the defending and challenging clubs that after the defender had been selected, the club should not select another yacht in the event of an accident to the one selected. At that time it was thought that there would be a postponement because of the war, and the defender was to be announced one week before the date set for the first race. If the club selected the Resolute now and the Herreshoff shops should be burned down during the winter and the Resolute destroyed the club would be without a defender unless the challenging club agreed to waive that condition.

Charles Francis Adams 2d, who handled the Resolute, is in favor of the defender being selected as early as possible. It is not necessary to announce publicly the name of the yacht selected until the last moment, but as Alexander S. Cochran has admitted that the Resolute is a better all around boat than the Vanitie Mr. Adams would like to have the Resolute selected early in the season and the Vanitie held as a trial boat. As the yachts have been sailing changes have been made on each.

Wants More Trial Races.

The Vanitie has been changed as often as the Resolute and while the Resolute has won the majority of races there is no way of telling whether the changes have been beneficial. Mr. Adams would like the Vanitie to be kept in one trim and condition and to be raced consistently against the Resolute. Then they could experiment with the Resolute and find out exactly how to trim the yacht to get her best speed, and in this way the Vanitie would be doing a real service to the Resolute.

Mr. Cochran has said often that if the Vanitie can help increase the speed of the Resolute a few minutes over the cup course his yacht will have done

ARMY-NAVY GAME FUNDS GO TO RELIEF SOCIETY.

The proceeds of the annual Army-Navy football contest, after the expenses have been paid are divided between the Army and Navy Relief societies. The following is the amount of money turned over to the associations for games played on the University of Pennsylvania field: 1903, $9,071.26; 1904, $8,515.98; 1905, $5,208.12; 1906, $4,057.79; 1907, $2,622.28; 1908, no game; 1909, $7,428.17; 1910, $5,750; 1911, $12,010.47. Average, $5,507.97.

In 1905 when the game was played at Princeton, the relief societies received $2,147.38. At New York in 1912 each received $12,000.

SPORTING EDITORS NOTES.

Collins, Murphy, Baker and McNie of the Athletics are among the first seven run-ketters in the American league.

Manager Bill Hinchman of the Columbus club, who was recently purchased by the Pirates, is the high man in American association batting.

Bill James, of the Braves, and Donk, the Cardinals' crack pitcher, are running neck and neck for the National league pitching honors.

Benny Knuff, of the Indianapolis team, continues to lead the Federal league in batting by a good margin over Steve Evans, of Brooklyn.

Outfielder Tutwiler, who goes to the Red Sox from the Providence team, has had two previous trials in fast company as a member of the Detroit Tigers.

According to unofficial averages the Giants have it on the Braves in batting, but the Stallings clan has a shade on the McGrawites in fielding.

It looks as though Fritz Maisei will succeed Clyde Milan as king of the base-stealers, as the Yankee infielder is now leading both the American and National leagues in sack-piffing.

Charley Clancy is making quite a record as a minor league pilot. In the four years he has managed the Winston-Salem North Carolina league team Clancy has won three pennants.

Minnesota has a promising lineman in Meyers, who played on the freshman team last year.

W. Earl Sprackling, the former All-American quarter, will assist Coach Robinson with the Brown squad this year.

It is said that the full quota of 68,000 seats in the Yale Bowl will be ready for the Harvard-Yale game on Nov. 21.

"The" Eichenlaub, the All-Western fullback of last season, is back at Notre Dame, weighing 200 pounds. He carries his weight easily and is one of the fastest of the big men on the gridiron.

Frank Loughrey and Jim Coffey have signed up with Al Lippe for a tour of Australia.

Promoter McCarty of Los Angeles desires to stage a clash between Alie Attell and Johnny Kilbane.

Jim Johnson, the colored heavy, showed quite an improvement in boxing in his recent bout with Sam Langford at Boston.

Georges Carpentier, the French champion now doing military duty in France, is driving an officer's auto and is not in much danger.
