THE ORGAN OF ST. MARY'S.

BY OMA HOLLINGSWORTH.

When skies are chill and leaden,
 And from the dismal street
 The tempest's murmur deaden
 The sound of passing feet;
 When wild gusts seize the shutter,
 And shake the loosened pane,
 And dies to darkness utter
 The dreary day of rain;

Out o'er the nightfall stealing,
 As o'er a troubled breast,
 The old church organ pealing
 Its twilight hymn of rest,
 Sends forth a message holy
 Unto the listening ear,
 Bidding the tired soul fully
 Yield up itself in prayer.

Oh, then I fancy heaven
 Some echo gives release,
 And falls upon the even
 A moment's pause of peace!
 As boats from dim St. Mary's
 Unto the listening ear,
 The solemn benediction,
 In accents sweet and clear.

And when those unseen numbers
 Waken the well known chords,
 For me an old spell lingers
 In the familiar words;
 Recalling angel voices
 From out the past again,
 Which die to sadness only
 As dies the long "Amen!"

And ah, I love to hear it—
 That organ peal of praise!
 Whose music soothes the spirit
 On eves of saddest days;
 When He, who hushed the tumult
 Of far-off Gallilee,
 Speaks to the restless bosom,
 As to a wayward sea.

To the Point.

We clip the following from the address made before the Press Association by Mr. Wilson, editor of one of the Fort Worth papers:

We can discern good results already from the organization of this association, but really the foundation has hardly been laid for the work that should be done. For the amount of work done and good accomplished to the state and people, there is no profession so poorly paid. The association should adopt a prudent, but at the same time pertinent course of action, looking to wiser legislation for not only the benefit of newspapers, but also of the subscribers of our papers. That legislation which provides that certain matters of interest to every citizen may be written and posted at three points in the county is a downright insult to the wealth of the state and to the industry and intelligence of the people. Such bills when posted may be torn down in an hour by some ruthless hand, or melted or washed down by the first rain, or blown down by the first wind, and yet the law is satisfied, and the officer has met the requirements. But if the poster survives all these and many other enemies, still a very large proportion of the people must live inconvinient to any three points in the county. Now if the people could possibly know at what time these documents would be posted, and if the posters survive all enemies, there is hardship in requiring the farmer to leave his plow idle while he rides twenty or forty miles to consult his oracle. The citizen who pays to have his news furnished him daily or weekly through the most approved channel under the sun, is entitled to receive the official news from the state and county. He is taxed to run the machinery of state, and must himself run from home and business in order to know whether his property is in danger of being wrested from him by the law and officers whom he supports with his substance. The people may reasonably expect that every judicial, executive or judiciary act of the government, state and county, shall be brought to their notice through their newspaper. I hope the association will address itself squarely to this matter.

The Result of Necessity.

What the ancients suffered for the want of knowledge in medical science can only be appreciated by contrasting the vast amount of suffering cured and pain alleviated in modern times, by the use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases. Its introduction was characterized by the necessary withdrawal of a score or more of illusive, quick nostrums, whose evil effects have left living monuments to denounce them. Thus is exemplified the proverb, Necessity is the mother of invention.

Mrs. Parnell, the mother of Charles, the Irish patriot, said at a public meeting in New York last week: "You have only to wait and watch for England's downfall and disruption. I don't think the Almighty can make it too bad for England."
