EXHIBIT COMMITTEE MEETING.

July 23, and 24, Selected as Dates for Holding Farmers' Union Exhibit.
 The committee appointed at the recent meeting of the County Union to arrange for the Union exhibit in this city in July, held a meeting at the court house a few afternoons ago and the following are the proceedings of the meeting:
 The committee selected July 23 and 24, Friday and Saturday, as the days for the Farmers' Union Exhibit to be held at the Union warehouse in this city.
 It was decided to take the exhibits to the farmers congress which meets at the A. and M. College on July 27th, and a committee will be appointed to transfer the exhibit to the college.
 Each local Union will contribute the sum of $5.00 to create a premium fund to be divided as follows: First premium, 40 per cent; second premium, 30 per cent; third premium, 20 per cent; fourth premium, 10 per cent. The above premiums will be competed for by the various local Unions.
 Valuable premiums will be donated by the merchants and other public spirited people, to be competed for by individuals.
 It is the purpose of the committee to have a live stock exhibit at the same time and in connection with the agricultural exhibit. It is found that the Farmers' Union warehouse is not large enough for all exhibits, then the big hull house of the Bryan oil mill will be used to care for the live stock.
 J. Webb Howell and F. W. Yeager were appointed a committee to make out a premium list and solicit premiums.

ACCIDENT AT COLLEGE.
 The buggy horse of Prof. J. C. Nagle ran away with his buggy yesterday afternoon and ran against a tree smashing things up pretty badly. The horse was driven by Miss Davis and she was thrown out and right badly hurt, though not seriously.

CITY COUNCIL.
 The regular monthly meeting of the city council was in session this afternoon when the Eagle went to press. It was the time for the installation of the new officers, and a settlement of certain parts of the water, lights, and sewerage matters. The Eagle will publish the full proceedings tomorrow.

THE NUMBER SEVEN.
 It Rarely Occurs in the Science of Weights and Measures.
 How would you define "seven"? The Standard Dictionary says it is "one more than six." Webster's calls it "one more than six or one less than eight." The abridged Webster says it is "five and two," and the Century's definition runs "one more than six; the sum of three and four."
 In metrology—that is, the science of weights and measures—seven is comparatively rare. The seven days of the week form a striking example of its use, however.
 Scholars have found, too, that the Egyptian cubit contained seven handbreadths. "Cubit" is from the Latin "cubitus," the elbow, or the distance from the elbow to the end of the middle finger. The Roman cubit was one and a half Roman feet or 17.4 English inches, but the royal Egyptian cubit, used in the building of the pyramids of Gizeh, perhaps 2500 B. C., has been learned from measuring sticks found in the tombs to have been 20.64 English inches. The ordinary cubit was divided into six palms or handbreadths, and the use of seven in the Egyptian cubit is ascribed by some investigators to a probable custom of placing the hand behind the elbow when measuring along walls with the forearm and leaving it on the wall until the arm was laid down again. It should be added that there are many other cubits of widely different values, both ancient and modern.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Rough on the Architect.
 "When I got the order to design a big wholesale house for a firm that has stores in five cities besides New York naturally I was elated," said an architect. "I'll plan a building that is bound to be satisfactory," I said to myself, "and then they will give me the commission for those new stores they expect to put up in those other five cities."
 "Well, I did turn out a splendid store—a store that was admired by everybody in the wholesale trade. My patrons were pleased, too, but instead of giving me an order for those other buildings they simply used the same plans over and over again and built all their houses alike. That's what I call playing a low down trick on a fellow."—New York Globe.

Making Good.
 "Is he making good in his new line of work?"
 "Yes, indeed. He is already finding fault with the way his boss carries on the business."—Detroit Free Press.
 The most essential feature of a man is his improbability.—Fiske.

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize it at First Sight.
 "Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when it was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Bittinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time.
 "On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the way some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out:
 "'Who is it?'
 "'Abe Lincoln,' was the reply. 'I've been looking for my house. Can you tell me where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two.'
 "It was explained to him that during his absence Mrs. Lincoln had added another story. He laughed and went back to the strange house."
 He used to tell the joke on himself many times, according to the major.—National Magazine.

CONTINUOUS SHOWS.

They Were Started by B. F. Keith in a Boston Store.
 It was in the month of January, 1883, that Mr. B. F. Keith, who had been studying the show business with far-seeing eyes for many years, presented in a store that he had leased in Boston, the first continuous show ever seen on any stage. He paid his performers $20 a week for a single turn and $40 for double and required them to give eight or nine turns a day. His "top liner" or chief attraction was a pound and a half baby. The doors of his playhouse were thrown open at noon, and from that time until half past 10 at night the performance went on without interruption.
 Patrons were allowed to spend the entire day in the theater, and at first so many availed themselves of this opportunity to get a substantial filling of amusement at a small cost that Mr. Keith realized that he must either abandon the idea of a continuous entertainment or else invent some method by which the audience could be driven out of the building and place made for those outside who were waiting for admittance. Necessity is the mother of invention, especially when it is mated with sharp Yankee wit, and it was thus that what is known as "the chaser" came into the world.—James L. Ford in McClure's Magazine.

A Ghost in a Clock.
 Basingstoke provides a remarkable story of a ghost in the form of a clock. At the approach of midnight each night the otherwise peaceful "grandfather" becomes inhabited by a spirit. The ticking changes into a deep and peculiar thumping, the clock increases in stature, while a pair of gray feet protrude from beneath its base. Passing through transitional stages the thumping is replaced by a spasmodic breathing, and upon the stroke of 12 the pendulum door opens, revealing an enormous ashly gray hand with mal-shaped fingers. The clock face disappears, displaying a frightful gray head, large and round, with abnormally long, pale blue eyes. Beyond a quiet stroll, which causes weird tappings along the landings during the night, the apparition is inoffensive and is said to prove of great service in sending every one early to bed.—London Tit-Bits.

One View of Saving.
 Ik Marvel, author of the "Reveries of a Bachelor," was all his life opposed to the modern commercial spirit. A young disciple from the west once visited the aged writer in his New England home. The youth, a poet, said he thought he would put away his verses and write magazine love stories, so as to be able to save money.
 But Mr. Mitchell frowned and shook his head.
 "Saving," he said, "is the mania for depriving yourself of things which you want now for fear you may not have things which you won't possibly want forty years hence."

Francis and Dollars.
 We like to read French stories, but every time francs are mentioned we stop to turn them into dollars. "She had 17,000 francs per year in the funds," the story will say, whereupon we stop to divide seventeen by five—to turn the francs into dollars and find out how much money the heroine had.—Atchison Globe.

The Occasional Hero.
 "He woke up one morning to find himself famous."
 "Well?"
 "But people had forgotten all about him by the time the 4 o'clock extras were out."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
Worse Off.
 "The bachelor is worse off than the married man? How do you make that out?"
 "The married man is afraid of only one woman; the bachelor is afraid of all of them."—Houston Post.
Didn't Get a Chance.
 She—What did papa say when you asked for my hand? He—Why, he couldn't say a word. She—He couldn't? He—No; your mother was there!—Yonkers Statesman.
