VETERANS INVADE MEMPHIS

Heroes of the Grey From all Over the South in Annual Reunion.

Special to the Eagle.

Memphis, Tenn., June 7.—The great Confederate reunion will begin here tomorrow and continue through Thursday, culminating a day later with imposing ceremonies at Vicksburg at the unveiling of the Stephen D. Lee monument.

Outward and visible signs that a great gathering is at hand are abundant in Memphis today. Buildings everywhere are decorated with flags and bunting and the streets and other public places are alive with Confederate veterans, sons of Confederate veterans, daughters of the Confederacy, members of memorial associations and other visitors from every nook and corner of the South.

The general committee has prepared for 25,000 visitors and it is believed fully this number will be on hand. The rush began in earnest today, and all trains coming this way are crowded with visitors. From Arkansas, Alabama, Texas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, the Carolinas, Oklahoma and other states the delegations are pouring in. Already many of the scores of sponsors and maids have arrived and the social features of the reunion will be notable.

The veterans are much more feeble than when they were here eight years ago. The number has been thinned by death and age has dimmed their eyes, bent their forms and given a snowy appearance to the beards and hair.

Memphis is extending a hearty welcome to the veterans, their sons and daughters and sightseers. Everywhere are flags and bunting. The Confederate colors predominate, but the national colors are everywhere intertwined with the emblems of the storm cradled nation that fell. One of the most conspicuous features of the decorations is a mammoth Confederate flag made from electric lights and hung across Main street at the intersection of Madison Ave. Main street from Poplar to Linde, has been converted into a court of honor, which strings of electric lights on each side and handsome arches at some of the most prominent street intersections.

The decorations are tasteful as well as elaborate. Few people have refused to heed the request of the committee in charge to add a bit of color in honor of the occasion. The Bijou Theater, where the general sessions of the reunion are to be held; the Forrest monument in Forrest Park, the Auditorium, where the grand reunion ball takes place, and the Tri-State Fair buildings and grounds, where several of the features of outdoor entertainment will be held, have all been elaborately decorated.

The reunion will be called to order promptly at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning by Major Gen. J. H. McDowell. The remainder of the program for the annual session is as follows: Address of welcome by Governor Patterson, in behalf of the State of Tennessee; address of welcome by Mayor Malone, in behalf of the City of Memphis; address of welcome by Gen. George W.
Gordon in behalf of the executive committee and Memphis veterans response by Gen. Clement A. Evans, commander in chief of the United Confederate veterans.

At 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the veterans will assemble in the convention hall to listen to the annual oration, which will be delivered by Gen.
Theodore S. Garrett of Norfolk, Va. Another feature of the afternoon will be the grand floral parade.

Naturally the reunion will be the occasion for numerous smaller reunions.

The largest will be that of the Sons of Veterans which will continue for three days. Other affairs will be the meetings of the Southern Memorial association, the association of Medical Officers of the Army and Navy of the Confederacy, the United Confederate Choir of America, the Confederate Naval Veterans, the Forrest Cavalry, the Wheeler corps and numerous other bodies.

The floral parade tomorrow and the general parade on Thursday, are to be most elaborate. While the route of march will be shorter, for obvious reasons, than usual, every feature that will lend to the reality of the occasion will be employed, and every provision that suggests itself for the comfort of the veterans will be given consideration.

The reunion of the Sons of Confederate Veterans promises to be of more than ordinary interest and importance.
The sons propose to make a complete revision of their by-laws, with a view to the betterment and upbuilding of their organization. For this reason it is expected that the attendance will be unusually large. The general arrangements for the reunion of the organization have been perfected by Adj. Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, grandson of the famous cavalry leader.
