THE HONK OF THE WILD GOOSE.

The honk of the wild goose is inspiring and also contains a beautiful lesson for man. When the geese are heard going south man knows he is the harbinger of winter and it is time to prepare to meet its howling and chilling blasts. We are always charged when we hear the geese and it recalls to mind how we creened our neck when a child to see them high overhead, and how we stood and watched them until the flap of the last wing vanished in the distant sky. There is nothing more charming in all literature than Bryant's "Ode to the Water Fowl." Our old black mamas used to sing a ditty one couplet of which ran like this: "Don't you hear that wild goose say 'Tis too cold in Can-a-day." That's what it means when the geese go south that winter is close behind them. They are now going over and it behooves us to get ready. The wood pile must be looked after, and we must have plenty of good warm covering. The most comfortable feeling in the world is to snuggle up in bed on a cold night under a good warm all wool blanket. "Coulter has one of the prettiest lines ever shown in Bryan. They are warm as lamb's wool and soft as elderdown. He has them in all shades and colors, ranging in price from 65 cents for the single bed to the big eleven quarter for the double bed, as high as $8.50. His special, "The Golden Rule," regular $5.00 value, is selling at $2.98. Have the forethought of the wild geese and get your blankets now before the blizzard strikes. 294-57

PROF. ALVORD TALKS.

"The San Antonio Fair is a good one and undoubtedly a success," said Professor C. H. Alvord, professor of agriculture at the Agricultural and Mechanical College, yesterday. Professor Alvord was on his return trip to College from San Antonio, where he acted as judge of the Jersey cattle and of the agricultural exhibit of the various counties. The crowds were large and enthusiastic, and the exhibits were good, indeed. Mr. Alvord says that in the county exhibits Brazos county won first prize, $500. The exhibit came from Bryan and was prepared by W. F. Yeager of that town for the Farmers' Union. The exhibit from the Panhandle arrived after the judging.—Houston Post.
