BRITISH LOSS NOT AS LARGE AS REPORTED

Later Reports From the Great Naval Battle Indicate the British Losses Were Not as Great as Reported and that the German Losses Were Greater. The Loss to Both Sides in Men and Ships Was Staggering. It is Reported the German Ships Took Refuge After the Battle in Danish Waters, That They Have Been Ordered to Leave and That the British Ships are Waiting for Them. No Change on Verdun Front. Two German Zeppelins Were Destroyed.

(By Associated Press) London, June 3.—According to the latest accounts of the great naval engagement which was fought off Jutland Wednesday, the German losses included two battleships, one battle cruiser, one light cruiser and six destroyers sunk, two battle cruisers were damaged and three battleships were hit. This shows much larger German losses than were first reported. This served as a comfort to the people of Great Britain somewhat, although the British loss apparently remains unchanged. A tug boat arrived at Hook of Holland, this morning with eight of the crew of the Frauenlob, which sank ten minutes after being struck. Nothing of the fate of the remaining three hundred members of the crew has been learned. Captain William Hall, chief of the intelligence division of the admiralty, authorized the Associated Press to say that the German report of the loss of the Marlborough and Warspite was untrue, and that both ships are safe in harbor. The "British still control the North Sea."

According to estimates made here, which, in the absence of official figures can only be conjectural, the British losses in men must be somewhere in the neighborhood of 5000. A similar estimate of the German losses are at least between 2000 and 3000 men.

STATEMENT MADE BY GERMANY.

(By Associated Press.) Berlin, June 3.—The full German high sea fleet which engaged the British fleet in the Jutland battle Wednesday was under the personal command of Vice Admiral Scheer, the energetic German commander who succeeded Admiral Von Poul. The British fleet was estimated apparently as twice as strong in guns and ships as that of Scheer's. German commentators say that the Germans maintained the field after the battle, which was shown by the rescue of British survivors. The exact ranges of the fight are undetermined, but it is assumed they were at about eight miles. It is stated at the admiralty headquarters that at least thirty-four British capital ships were engaged and the British torpedo flotillas were severely defeated.

War Summary.
(By Associated Press.) London, June 3.—In the course of repeated violent attacks on Fort Vaux on the Verdun front, east of the Meuse, the Germans penetrated a deep ditch north of the main French position. The interior of the works, the French war office announced today, is still held by the French. The Austro-Hungarian advance into Italy in Southern Tyrol is continuing unchecked, according to Friday's Vienna statement. The Austrians have captured several strategic positions in the Arziero district.

Two Zeppelins Destroyed.
(By Associated Press.) Esbjerg, Denmark, June 3.—Two Zeppelin dirigibles were reported were reported by fishermen returning to port today, to have been destroyed by one airship. All the crew is said to have perished.

May Be Another Battle.
(By Associated Press.) London, June 3.—An unconfirmed report is in circulation that the German warships took refuge in Danish waters after the North Sea battle, and it is said they have been notified to leave within 24 hours, and that the British fleet is awaiting them.

Captain and Crew Lost.
(By Associated Press.) London, June 3.—(Bulletin.)—The admiralty received a report today that Captain Proves, commander of the battle cruiser Queen Mary, and the entire personnel of that boat, numbering about one thousand, were lost. A wireless dispatch from Berlin says the German admiralty admits the loss of the dreadnought Westfalen.
