At last "Squire John" got his loving bride, so that ended the story of a second Jessie. Schoolboy.

Exchange Gossip.

Countess Boni seems to have been pretty well pleased.—Gonzales Inquirer.

She deserves no sympathy and will get none from the American public. She went abroad for a titled husband and reaping the harvest. Her brothers have been content with sensible American girls for wives, and her sister, Helen Miller Gould, is the best beloved woman in America today for her charitable work. She alone is regarded with contempt of the whole Gould family.—Hallettsville Herald.

This is the plain, unvarnished truth. Count de Castellane came to this country solely as a fortune hunter, and Anna Gould knew this fact as well as anybody.

Shiner gave a firemen's annual masquerade ball on the 31st and there were 75 masks on the floor. Youkum gave a Red Men's mask ball on the 22d and there were 125 masks present. Hallettsville gave a mask ball on the 15th, under fire department auspices, and there were ten masks on the floor and the department furnished six of the costumes gratis. Oh, Tempore! Oh, Mores! Oh, Hell!—Hallettsville Herald.

Tut, tut, Beaumier, you should not use "cuss" words.—Yoakum Times.

Beaumier is a member of the fire department and has a cuss coming, and just think of the relief it will afford him.

That man, William Randolph Hearst, is a curious kind of a democrat. He sought the democratic nomination for president last time, failing to get that, he ran against the regular democratic nominee for mayor of New York. Defeated at the polls, he appealed to the courts and was again knocked out. Now he wants to be Governor of New York, and says if the democrats do not nominate him, he will assist the republicans to retain control of the State. There are three things that render Mr. Hearst an undesirable candidate: He is troubled with an overweening self-conceit, he has more money than he knows what to do with, and his democracy will not wash.—Alice Echo.

We have quite a number of the same kind of democrats in Lavaca Co.

The nine millions that the countess has wasted on her Count would have built and endowed a large and splendidly appointed hospital, wherein, for generations to come, the ills of poor humanity might have been assuaged without money and without price.—Bryan's Commoner.

With the exception of Miss Helen the Goulds were not addicted to that sort of thing.

In speaking of the coming meeting of the democratic executive committee on March 12th, Chairman McCutchan stated it as his belief that the majority of the white voters wanted a white men's primary. He expresses our opinion that a white men's primary for county and precinct officers was inevitable and that either the executive committee by resolving itself into a white men's mass meeting would inaugurate it or the committee would leave this task to a regularly organized White Men's Union.—Hallettsville New Era.

We do not believe that Chairman McCutchan expressed any such opinion, and his friends look for a prompt denial.

We believe the railroad companies should have some redress where they pay a claim that so suddenly relieves the life-long cripple. We are in favor of allowing the railroad company a chance to prove that they have been robbed, their money
