

TENNESSEE'S CAPITAL.

Hundred Years Old--Year's Happenings of Note--A Flourishing City.

[W. C. C. in the Evansville, (Ind.) Courier.] It is evident that the "Rock City" has a good deal of snap about it, for the centennial decorations were far above the average, and everything presented vim and activity. Nashville is a city of vast dignity and worth. There is a solidity and substantial bearing about the city which inspires universal respect. They make few pretensions, but are earnest and energetic.

SOME SALIENT YEARS in her history, now that she is a century old, may be of interest. Brevity is the soul of, etc.:

Sewanee Indians were original possessors of the soil. Cherokees were here when the whites came. A Frenchman, name unknown, traded here in 1710, succeeded by his clerk in 1770. First white settlers came here in 1770-80. Gen. James Robertson and others from North Carolina, came that year. Some also from South Carolina. Donelson and party from East Tennessee came in 1780. All lived in small forts. At a marriage, Gen. R. performing the ceremony, the ladies as a delicacy, "roasted ears of corn" and the gentlemen dried meat. First male child born 11th of January, 1781. Government notables, the sheriff and clerk died in 1783, and North Carolina protected the settlement. Built a log court house and prison in 1783. Town surveyed in 1784. First doctor came in 1783; used pills made of a storey and covered with sugar. Tavern opened in 1786, goods packed from Philadelphia on ten horses. Tavern opened in 1786. Rates established by law; 1787, lots sold for $4 each; 1788, constitution of United States was almost unanimously voted down here; January 12, 1789, Andrew Jackson admitted to the bar; appointed attorney general in 1790; 1796, first church built--methodist; 1797, newspaper established; 1801, intendant and six commissioners elected; market house built 1804; population, 400; 1805 Aaron Burr visited Jackson and the year after was burned in effigy; 1806, mayor and six aldermen elected; Gen. Robertson, the old pioneer, died September 1st, 1814; 1816, Nashville female academy incorporated, flourished till 1861; 1818, first steamboat, 110 tons freight to New Orleans, five cents per hundred; 1822, bridge built across the river; 1823, population, 3,460; 1824, city divided into wards; 1829, quinine used for fever; 1833, cholera; water works and asylum built, 1830 to 1833; 1841, first daguerrotype taken; silk made in 1842; institute for the blind in 1844; Jackson died 8th June, 1845; corner stone of capitol laid July 4th, 1845; (completed in 1878); first telegram received from Louisville, March, 1848; theatre built 1850; Jenny Lind, "the Swedish nightingale," gave two concerts here in 1851, choice seats sold at auction for $200.00 each, standing room, $3.00, (squel now on six bits); first passenger train on N. & C. R. R., 1851; corner stone for first public school laid 1851; in 1853 Ole Bull and Patti were here, and six daily papers.

The city has grown to a population of about 40,000, has nine flourishing public schools, with about 3,000 pupils; has one university, the Vanderbilt, a handsome institution and well endowed; medical college, an extensive military academy, a successful female seminary, two colored colleges--in fact Nashville is ahead of any city of its size in the United States on institutions of learning, there being about 6,500 scholars all told.

In public buildings, stores, manufactories, etc., etc., few cities surpass her. Decidedly a railroad center. Does an annual business of about $75,000,000. In residence architecture, location and scenery the city is prominent.

THE CENTENNIAL, still in "full blast," is a credit to a city ten times her size. Space will not permit the mention this very attractive and meritorious institution deserves. It is a pronounced success and the whole State has cause to be proud of it.

GOV. HENDRICKS IN TENNESSEE. While drifting around among the dignitaries of the State congregated in the city, I chanced to hear a good deal concerning the political issues of this lively season, and herewith is given a synopsis of what is talked and felt. Ever since the terrible blight--to put it mildly--of the Democratic party suffered at the hands of that presidential gentleman, Mr. Tilden, Mr. Hendricks has been silent. His wrongs he bore with heroic fortitude; has never complained, or, like Tilden, forced himself into a conspicuousness disgusting and hideous. Mr. Hendricks has been all the while, by no means sulky; but silent. Silent above those things so petty and contemptible, which has cropped out of Tilden. His wrongs were before the world and their enormity made them press against the minds of every honest citizen in the land. They needed no word from him.

His name is a synonym of courage and patriotism. His services to his party are known--all his worth--and it is great, he has daily won friends. His purity of character and public service is a pleasant thought to all who voted for him. No human ever heard a regret expressed by anyone for having voted for Mr. Hendricks. Can the same be said of Tilden? A half million voices answer, no!

The people do not want Tilden. They know that he is insincere and would willingly plunge the party into ruin; that he knows he is injuring the party, and with one voice they echo the words of Terence: Valent qui inter nos disidium voluit.

The State delegates will likely go to Cincinnati unimpaired, but Tilden will be a corpse in the State convention and his obsequies known to all. THE LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R. R. has taken possession here and business has struck a boom because of it. The rumor of discrimination is untrue, and all relationships are pleasant.

"The Bible, the Blessed Bible."

DEDICATED TO E. J. C.

The blessed Bible, how I love its page sublime!

More than all the varied scenes of glory That cluster 'neath a southern clime,

Or gather round the arctic's sky so hoary, I love the beauties and grandeur of mother nature,

But far, far do I love her Author more; These fair mentories I can but treasure, Yet I love to eon His sacred Message more.

The blessed Bible, how it glows with love divine!

Though it fails to measure the love of the Father, Where-with He "so loved" this poor heart of mine, And gave His Son that I might be ransomed,

And in this ever welcome and dear word picture, I see my precious and loving Saviour's face;

And God's glory shines upon each feature, While my spirit inhabits His marvelous grace.

A lamp shall it ever be to my pathway, As it leads to that lovely "promised land," To my weary spirit a constant stay, Till I sing that "new song" with a white-robed band.

Then, God be with and bless its valiant heralds, As they proclaim its blessings like beauties rare,

And give to the sons of men His diamonds, Found in the mine of a loving Father's care.

McMinnville, Tenn. PHILEMONA.

Department of Etiquette.

It is a breach of etiquette for a husband or wife to speak of each other by their initial letter. When you hear a lady saying, "B. gave me this," or a gentleman saying, "I always refer such matters to Mrs. P.," you may rest assured, whatever their social station, they are low-bred. "Civility," says Lord Chesterfield, "is particularly due to all women; and remember that no provocation whatsoever can justify any man in not being civil to every woman; and the greatest man would justly be reckoned a brute if he were not civil to the meekest woman. It is due to their sex, and is the only protection they have against the superior strength of ours."

Too great familiarity towards a new acquaintance is a breach of etiquette. You are less likely to offend by being too ceremonious. To notice, by look or word, any deformity, any scar or misfortune to the face or figure of a friend, is not only a breach of etiquette of the grossest kind, but is a want of humanity and good feeling as well.

Temperance Department.

EDITED BY THE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

"Will I be Like You, Papa?"

How many times a child has spoken pointed words for Temperance, when most they were needed! The Cedar Rapids Republican gives this interesting recital:

A gentleman of this city, who for years has been more or less under the influence of liquor, and whose red nose and bloated figure stamped him as an inebriate, had gone home to his wife and children in his usual condition. He was not unkind in act or in words. It was his delight to play at games with his little ones, as he was able, and to entertain them with wonderful stories. On this occasion the family were all together in the sitting room, and the usual games having been played, little Freddie, a lad about six years of age, had climbed upon his father's knee, and was asking him all sorts of boyish questions. He talked as a child will--of what he would do when he was a "big man?" asked if he would be like papa then; and finally after a long and serious look into his father's face, with every shade of childish curiosity in voice and glance, put to him this bewildering query:

"Papa, when I grow up to be a man, will my nose be red like yours, and my face all swelled?" Ah! why should that swollen face grow redder than 'twas wont to be? Why should his arms so quickly draw that boy to his breast? And why should tears flow and voice tremble as he replied in words and tone that made mother's heart glad:

"No, Freddie! please God, you won't be like me when you get to be a man; and neither will your father, my boy, for from this hour he will lead a sober life."

"He like him?" He had not thought of that before, and the bare possibility staggered him. All the love of his father's heart cried out against such a fate. That boy!

His pride! going about with a bloated face and "swelled breath." No, no! he was prepared for that! Never before had he seen his own looks so clearly; they were reflected in the boy's--the boy grown to manhood; and honor, affection, and reason came to the rescue. The child had preached a sermon no orator could deliver, and innocence and ignorance had accomplished what learning and logic had aimed at in vain. Those words "went home."

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care. Its effects are as wonderful and as satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff. It gives the head a cooling, soothing sensation of great comfort, and the scalp by its use becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong. As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
