The Rebekah Banquet.

Invitations were out to a few friends of Evergreen Lodge Daughters of Rebekah to attend a banquet last night given in honor of Mrs. Stella Johnston, past president of the assembly, and at which a jewel was presented to the lady. The banquet, as usual in such affairs consisted of an elegant luncheon with hot coffee. After the company had gathered to a number of about a hundred they were paired and stood at the table while Rev. Leonard invoked the divine blessing, after which Mrs. Harris in a neat little speech announced that the gathering was in honor of Mrs. Stella Johnston, the beloved sister of the lodge who had done so much for the society. The company were then seated and proceeded to regale the inner man. After a time order was called and Mrs. Haight, past noble grand and district deputy, in a neat little address presented Mrs. Johnson with a pretty little jewel, emblematic of the order, and of the occasion. Mrs. Haight recited the fact that the whole affair was a secret of which Mrs. Johnston knew nothing. The address was apt and touching in the recital and a complete surprise to Mrs. Johnston.

Mrs. Johnston replied to the address of Mrs. Haight in which she said she was inclined to be angry when she learned that the lodge was holding a call session to which she was not invited, little dreaming that she was the head center of the same, and she had declared that "if the lodge could get along without her she could do without the lodge" and had no idea of coming to this banquet but her husband had been invited and persuaded her to come with him. She appreciated the jewel and said she would always keep it as a token of the love and respect of her sisters of the lodge.

After the luncheon the people gathered in the lodge room again and listened to first a recitation by Mrs. Jessie Kendall and followed by short talks from different gentlemen and ladies present. The evening was one of the most pleasure and profit ever held in the city, and was duly appreciated by the visitors outside the order especially.

The Chautauqua.

The C. L. S. C. met at their club room Wednesday afternoon, October 17. The "Circle" was called to order promptly at three o'clock, by the President, Miss Clara Miller. Minutes read and approved. Constitution read for the benefit of new members.

Mrs. W. B. Leonard's name was presented for membership. She was unanimously elected. Mrs. Gribi was appointed critic.

Roll call responded to by quotations from Euclid. The leader Mrs. Birge then took charge of the meeting, giving an exercise in the pronunciation of proper names used in the history lesson, which was very instructive. She then gave a very interesting review in French history, including "The Absolute Monarchy," the privileged or unprivileged classes and "Social contracts and morality." Also review in "Rivalry of Nations including Democratic England."

Several members were then called upon to give two of the most significant facts in the first three chapters of French history, which was readily responded to by Mesdames Cochran, Fox and Brown.

A very instructive selection was read by Mrs. Gribi in regard to "The strike in the Pennsylvania coal fields."

Work was then assigned by the leader, Mrs. J. W. Brown for the next meeting. General work 4th and 5th chapters of French history and 4th chapter of "Rivalry of Nations."

Adjourned to meet at club room, Wednesday October 24th, at three o'clock.
