Convention Was Not So Peaceful At Close

the clamor that arose from the delegates that the original motion would lose and Murray made the motion that the amendment be tabled. Here was where Justice R. L. Williams of the supreme court arose to a point of order and another clamor arose, after which Murray announced that rather than take the time to call the roll, he would agree to the amendment and on motion of D. H. Linebaugh the resolution, as amended, was adopted.

Then came a long wait while the delegates from the different judicial districts held their caucuses to name the members of the four committees; on credentials, organization, rules and order of business and platform and resolutions as provided for in the amended Murray resolution. It was in these caucuses that the anti-administration feeling became evident and in one or two counties where the opposition element was in the majority, there were open breaks. One of these occurred in the caucus of the Muskogee-Wagoner county delegates, where District Judge R. C. Allen had been slated for member of the resolutions committee. It was known that Judge Allen was in favor of abolishing the superior courts. He was left off the committee and S. V. O'Hara substituted. Judge Allen was upheld by a majority of the Wagoner county delegation although the Muskogee county delegation and the others of the Wagoner county delegation stayed with O'Hara. Judge Allen, however, later prepared a plank governing the abolishing of the superior courts which he submitted to the resolutions committee.

An adjournment was taken until 4 o'clock in order that the committee might meet and report as soon as possible.

Immediately after the convention was called to order after adjournment the matter of nominating a state examiner and inspector was brought to the front in the report of the committee on rules and order of business. Those who had been of the opinion that this matter would not be brought up in the convention were prepared to argue against it from a number of angles and two reports were read. The minority report provided for "nominations and ratification of state officers and congressmen." In the report of the majority the word "nominations" was omitted.

Fight an Examiner.

In the debate which followed W. B. Richards of Oklahoma county made a plea for the adoption of the majority report. W. N. Maben of Shawnee declared that there was a vacancy in the office of state examiner and inspector and called attention to the fact that Republicans would name a candidate and that the Democrats should do the same. Pat Gouling of Enid seconded a motion that the minority report be adopted and J. T. Coleman of Ardmore argued that the state committee was the proper body to handle the question. A. V. Van-Deventer of Bartlesville was for putting the matter up to the convention in which the people had more voice than in the committee. The argument was prolonged and the excitement was becoming intense when the chair recognized C. N. Haskell of Muskogee.

"Is there a vacancy?" Mr. Haskell asked the convention. "I have not looked up the law; I do not know anything about the case, but it seems as if it would be well for us to find out whether or not there is a vacancy before we go on with this argument," he continued. It was the cue the convention had been waiting for and it was acted upon at once. Mr. Haskell further helped to bring the debate to a close by moving that the reports of the majority and of the minority be adopted insofar as they were identical and that the committee be sent back into conference to look up the legal points involved.

Judge Williams offered an amendment that the district judges from every district except Oklahoma county be made members of the committee and the two reports were adopted as recommended by ex-Gov. Haskell.

The Resolutions.

Among the resolutions submitted by the committee was one favoring revision of the state primary law.

The chairman of the convention was authorized to name a committee of five to draft a better primary law. The allowing of members of one party to take part in the primary of another party was also condemned.

The resolutions also favored the abolishing of the state election board as it now exists and the organization of one with the secretary of state as chairman and members from the two dominant parties, with the provision that they draw no salary except for the days they were actually engaged.

The revision of the election laws so that the affirmative votes of a majority should always be required to pass an initiated bill was also demanded.

As the law now stands, on a bill initiated by the legislature every ballot is counted for the proposition except those where the "No" is written. It was under this law that the "Grandfather Clause" was passed.

A resolution was also introduced providing that members of the state central committee and of the party organization should not at the same time hold any public office, either state, county or federal. The immediate settlement of Indian questions and the matter of coal land leases were also demanded.

The state administration was pledged to exercise the strictest economy and the matter of economy in county affairs was also made a part of the resolutions committee report.

Of course the Democratic principles and all candidates for office came in for their share of indorsement, but all was peace and harmony, except the Giddings incident, until the matter of the supplemental report of the minority was read. A motion was made to table this, which provided for the selection of federal appointees by primaries, but Justice Robert L. Williams and others charged steam roller tactics, and William H. Murray, chairman of the committee, requested that the motion to table be withdrawn, which was done.

Judge Williams led the fight for the adoption of the supplemental minority report and Murray the fight against it.

GOT HIS EYES ON THE WRONG HORSE.

The diplomatic circle at the court house was in an uproar this morning and were gathered in little knots about the corridors discussing in stage whispers, the theft of a horse in which one high county official and a U. S. officer are implicated. Last to the story: Thomas Burke, United States marshal, is accused of stealing the horse and implicated with him is none other than Judge Will Linn, judge of the superior court. Also the net of circumstantial evidence is closing around S. L. Newman who, it is alleged, was also implicated in the act.

When Thomas Burke went from his office to his home last night he discovered his horse, which had been loose in the yard, was missing. Straightway and without further ado, did Mr. Burke form himself into a searching party and go forth to ascertain the exact whereabouts of his departed animal. Having procured a saddle horse from the stables of the sheriff's force he rode hard and long and was about to give up the chase, when it is alleged he was hailed by S. L. Newman and upon being informed that a horse was the object of the Burke searching party, Mr. Newman gave the information that a loose horse was grazing on South Fourth street. Straightway did Mr. Burke tie himself to South Fourth and gazed upon aforesaid loose horse. While he was thus engaged Judge Will Linn happened upon the scene and offered Mr. Burke a hitchhike from his own horse's bridle with which to lead the animal home. The proposition was accepted but when the horse had been caught and an attempt was made to lead it away, a vigorous protest was entered by a very small but very determined boy, who said the horse belonged to his mother. Disregarding the statement, Mr. Burke again started to lead the animal away, but was stopped this time by the woman herself and told in no uncertain terms that he was trying to lead away property that did not belong to him and intimated strongly that such an act would be construed as nothing less than a theft. Upon thus being convinced of his error, or caught with the goods, whichever is correct, he released the horse and returned home in haste, and eyewitnesses state that his own horse was standing peacefully in the barn when he returned. Further investigation of the matter is being taken up.

It Must Be True

Chickasha Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Chickasha, but scores of citizens testify. Endorsement by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is one of the public statements in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills:

C. E. Remi, carpenter, 501 North Third street, Chickasha, Okla., says: "Not a symptom of kidney complaint has returned since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1908. I gladly repeat the testimony I gave at the time in their praise. I believe that hard work and heavy lifting strained my back. When the sharp twinges seized me, it was all I could do to walk and I was too weak to lift any heavy weight. I knew that if I allowed the trouble to get a firm hold upon me, there would be no hope for a cure, so I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes before I was cured. I carry them around with me now when at work and at the least symptom of pain across my back, I take them. In this way I keep my kidneys in good working order."
