Real Estate and Farm Loans

The fine crops in Oklahoma and the low price at which land is being offered is going to bring a number of buyers to this portion of the state this fall. In fact, some are already here; we have four buyers looking at land now. Short crops the last three or four years has caused a reduction of the price of land from 25 to 30 per cent. We have listed for sale some first class upland well located, some well improved, from $25 to $40 per acre. Some fine bottom land $50 to $65 per acre. On part of this land you can pay one third to one fourth cash and get easy terms on the balance. If you want to buy a good piece of land and haven't sufficient cash, we have a loan company that is loaning money on the real value, not selling price. Some land that is priced at $25 to $40 per acre we can loan from $15 to $30 per acre. So in case you only have a small amount of cash we can loan you sufficient money to buy the land. We are prepared to make prompt inspection of land and can tell you what we can do without any delay. Our plan of loaning money is as good as can be had in Oklahoma. We will give you a sample of some of the bargains we have now in land and city property:

200 acres 4 1/2 miles from Chickasha, 170 acres in cultivation, 30 acres bottom, 20 acres alfalfa, living water.

Extra good 6-room modern house in first class condition, one block from pavement, one block from car line, good water, good barn. Price $2500.

Large 7-room house, corner lot, cement storm cave, good cistern, large shade trees, two blocks from high school. Price $1600; $600 cash, balance easy terms.

260 acres choice smooth upland in cultivation, three miles from Chickasha, 6-room house, barn, good water, has loan of $4000 at 7 per cent interest. Will exchange for first class Chickasha property.

100 acres first class smooth upland in cultivation, fenced, living water, two miles from Tuttle. Price $35 per acre, loan of $2000.

100 acres 5 miles from Chickasha, 30 acres bottom, balance good upland, small house and outbuildings, loan of $1500.00. Price $30 per acre.

LADY OF THE LAKE

By M. McCULLOUGH-WILLIAMS.

Like the grass, the shrubbery was unclipped—long trails grew as nature willed from the vines. But there was no touch of decay or poverty in the house proper—gay cushions upon the piazza, lawn rug spread between garden chairs, litter of new books. Doors stood hospitably wide, but there was no sign of life—not even after Withers had knocked with unusual vigor.

But presently an old negro peered cautiously around the corner of the house, stared at them hard a minute and then shrilled out in the high pitched tone of the stone deaf: "No use yer waitin'. Woon't see Miss M'ria-Susan much 'fore sundown—she've turned plumb foolish an' taken the bull kit an' b'illin' she've got yers off ter the crick, an' the swimmin' hole—with fishpoles an' o'ner baskets an' sich."

"Good! We'll follow—being fishermen of degree," Withers proposed gayly, slipping silver in the old, lean hand.

Davis hesitated. "Sure we'll be welcome!" he asked. "I confess the swimmin' hole tempts—but suppose we find it—occupied?"

Here the men found her, the lady of the lake. As the car stopped at the very water's edge they saw her splashing showers upon the heads of three small boys, gurgling and panting in the nearest shallow. Beyond, five young girls swam laboriously, almost painfully, in ward of three strapping lads. A young man and maiden lounged upon a blanket spread bank, and made a brave show at fishing.

The lady of the lake greeted Withers cordially and acknowledged Davis' presentation with an easy unconcern that robbed the situation of all awkwardness.

"I do wish you could come in," she declared heartily, waving her hand toward the enticing water. "Of course you can fish—you might ever wade, or dangle your feet in water. But don't, please, disturb them—waving toward the pair piscatorial. 'It would be cruelty to children—besides what is one nice girl among so many?'"

"Come out yerself! Can't we persuade you?" Withers entreated. She laughed softly, saying, "I will if you will help me in the closing game."

"Tell us how! We're your accomplices," Withers shot back.

She looked at the timorous small boys, saying reflectively: "I know they could swim if they had to—and they'd have to if they were pitched in here beside me, heels over head."

"Here they come! Catch!" Withers shouted, wading out and seizing the smallest youngster, to swing him deftly into the "swimmin' hole." Down went the child—to come up spluttering, but laughing, within a yard of Mrs. Elliot, who drew away saying firmly: "Now for it Tommy! Swim!"

Tommy swam—the plunge had washed away his cowardice. He ever patronized Ned, the next to be tossed Billy, who had bulldog jaw, wriggled and kicked.

"No—these are not plum children—just tots she picks up and invites here for a month or a fortnight," Withers explained. "Schoolboys, too—you see the big fellows—and girls."

"Mighty decent of her—if she is an accomplished flirt," Davis returned, his eyes fast upon the deserted cabin that served as bath house. Almost as he looked the small girls awaraged from one door of it, the lads and small boys from the other. And right upon their heels came the lady of the lake, glowing and happy, tendrils of wet hair clinging to her forehead, her eyes dewy dark, yet lacerant. Her thin blue frock, quaker-plaid, came modestly high at the throat, but had sleeves short enough to reveal arms of admirable taper and softness.

She looked down plaintively at her small well-shod feet, saying to Withers: "Jimmy, isn't it a shame not to go barefoot this fine hot weather?"

"Why not? No law against it!" Withers answered bravely. She shook her head sighing resignedly: "You forget Bridgeway. He would die of shame for me—and I really can't afford to kill my social conscience."

Bridgeway was the old black man who had met them at the house. He was a reminder from her father's time, and to him "M'ria-Susan" would always be a child. Indeed, she started almost guiltily when he appeared upon the opposite creek bank, making a trumpet of his lean hands and shouting: "Ye better come to the house righten erway! Er pesky pile more men is thar waitin' ter court ye."

"Shall we go boldly and send them about their business?" Davis asked—wondering at himself for his presumption. In response, he got a beautiful sidelong upward glance and a very soft: "N-no! I rather like to—hear what people have to say."

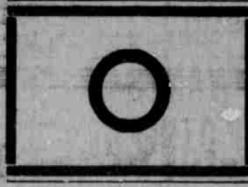

This was the beginning. The end came two weeks later when Davis, more madly in love than ever, he had dreamed he could me, asked her plumply to marry him—asked it also as diffidently as though he had not seen the world.

With her kindest smile, she told him frankly that she had promised Withers that she would marry him should she ever make up her mind to take a second husband. (Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
