CHECK REIN WAS TOO TIGHT

Witness Would Have Preferred to Be Given a Little Leeway in His Court Testimony.

An aged negro porter, nearly eighty years old, was arrested on some trivial charge, for which he was later discharged. It proved, during the trial, that he had never seen the inside of a court before, and the bustle of events greatly dazed and embarrassed him. As he stood up when his name was called the clerk sang forth:

"Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you shall give in this case shall be the truth, th' whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?"

And the negro started back gasping. Then he turred quickly to the bench.

"Mistah Briles," he said, "for he knew his honor from boyhood in an unofficial capacity, 'Ise puffedly willin' ter tell de truf, but mus' I be all coched up datter way, in case I might want ler git des a step or two offin de road? Hit don't give a man no leeway, suh!"

—Case and Comment.

Testing Quality of Ale.

At one time Shakespeare's father is said to have served as an ale conner or tester. In the olden days the ale conner tested only for sugar, and a musty (and doubtless ale-soaked) chronicler tells us that it was the custom of these testers to enter a tavern, call for a pot "by accident (sic) spill a puddle" on a bench and sit in the puddle for "half an hour by the clock." If the conner could rise with due dignity from his seat, all was well; but woe to the tapster whose ale glued the leather breeches of the tester to the bench—there was sugar in his ale; which brings us, by the well-worn route of anecdote, nearer home.

It has been a long jaunt for the old nag and a far cry from the inventive lye to the alchemical methods of one Harmon Gansevoort who, as a pioneer brewer in Albany, N. Y., is said to have loaned a particular zest to his brew by washing his leather breeches in it. Chacun a son gout.—Exchange.

WHERE REASON RULES

By HOPE AINSLIE.

"It's just this way, Uncle Ted. There's a girl up home, Betty Roberts, and we used to be rather sweet on each other. We both went to the same church and the academy, and I suppose I did write letters to her, and so on when I was seventeen or around there. Mother likes her and she's always said I'd marry Betty. Last year I went after that concession and met Mrs. Leonard. She loaned her collection of Chinese porcelains to the exhibit and I give you my word, Uncle Ted, from the instant we looked at each other I didn't give a rap whether I ever saw Betty or any other woman as long as I lived."

"Good looking, Jack?"

"She's just divine." Jack spoke fervently, reverently. "She's been a widow for four years; married at nineteen to a brute—"

"All good-looking widows' husbands were brutes," murmured the major. "Go on."

"That's all. I told her I loved her and she was giving me at least a chance until mother came out to Frisco and queered the whole thing. She met Mrs. Leonard at Aunt Anna's, and told her I was an impressionable boy, a perfect slave to sympathy and all that rot, always used to being petted, etc. Finally showed her Betty's picture as the little girl sweetheart back East waiting for me to get through my travels. You know the way she can put a thing over with that tone of her voice and her eyes. Well, I didn't have a chance after she had left. Dolores left for Santa Barbara the next day."

"Humph," mused the major. "Now she comes here. Did she know you were with me at the Springs?"

"No, sir. We haven't written."

"Well, I don't blame you, mind Jackie. She's a wonderfully attractive woman. And you're twenty-six, you know, old enough to toddle without the maternal apron strings. I should say, Lucia is a fine woman, good sister to me, but still—what's this Betty like?"

"Oh, she's all right," said Jack vaguely.

"There goes the widow," said the major, suddenly leaning forward. "God, she can ride!"

Jack vaulted the veranda rail and made for the mounting stone to meet the chestnut mare as she galloped up the shore road. His voice was a bit husky when he spoke to Mrs. Leonard slim and erect in her black habit, her hair wind-blown around her face, her eyes dark and evasive as he leaned toward her.

"Don't go in yet," he begged as the boy took the bridle. "I must speak to you. You've avoided me ever since you found I was here. Dolores—"

"Hush, Jack. Someone will hear you, you foolish boy—"

"Don't call me a boy," he swung back miserably. "I'm not. Come along the pine road just a little way. You wouldn't speak to me hardly at lunch. I know you were sorry even to see me here—"

"Oh, no, I was not. It was a pleasant surprise, really it was, Jack."

"A pleasant surprise. It made me perfectly mad to see you again—"

"The train service to Santa Barbara is quite regular," she said demurely.

"You wouldn't have seen me. You left without a word. You believed every last thing mother told you about me and Betty."

"Did I?"

"You cared, didn't you? Even though you went away. Never mind Betty. I haven't thought of anyone in the world but you for the last six months. Uncle Ted took me under his wing and brought me South because I wasn't fit for anything else."

She smiled, leaning forward as he crushed her hands in his, and quoted softly under her breath—

I had not dreamt that love would stay. Yet here he lingers many a day.

"Don't go away from me again, Dolores. I swear I'll follow you this time to the ends of the world—"

She laughed, her eyes brimful of tenderness.

"Oh, Jack, Jack, why didn't you follow me then if you really cared."

The major came leisurely toward them, the late afternoon mail in his hands.

"By George, Jack boy, here's news. Good afternoon, Mrs. Leonard. Betty Roberts eloped with Batcheller Phillips Saturday."

"I know Betty," said Dolores gently. "We are distant cousins, but she writes to me."

"Yes?" Writes to Jack, too, I should say. Here's one with a return line on it. Mrs. Batcheller Phillips, Washington, D. C., Hotel Grosvenor. Break the news to us, Jackie."

Jack opened the letter with a frown, and then smiled. He handed it to Dolores. It was typically Betty.

Dear Jack: I know what everybody'll say, and I don't care. I've always loved Betty and I'd like to know why I can't marry him if I want to. So we're eloping. I'm just as sick and tired as you are of forever being hurled at your head. I've written Dolores—she's my cousin. I wish you all kinds of luck. Happily.

BETTY.

Jack's shoulders unconsciously straightened. He turned resolutely to the major.

"Uncle, Ted, I'd like to have you know it first that Dolores and I are engaged," he said. "God bless Betty." (Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Breadth.

Breadth must have some limits; otherwise it cannot be breadth. The limits of breadth are as real and as well defined as the limits of narrowness. But many a man flatters himself that he is a broad man, or a man of broad views, or a man of breadth, just because he is not within the limits of a narrow man, yet while he cannot define the limits which contain him. No man can be a broad man, or a narrow man or indeed any sort of a man, without some well-defined boundaries. Even a hole in the ground must have its sides or edges. It is not worthy the name of a hole without these.—Toronto Presbyterian
