A Little Blossom
To Delight the Home

When it is known that in the near future the home is to be blessed with a new arrival the first thought should be "Mother's Friend."

This is an eternal remedy gently applied over the stomach muscles. It makes them firm and pliant, they expand naturally without undue strain. It removes from the nerves those influences which are responsible for much of the pain incident to the period of expectancy. It is for this reason that much of the distress such as morning sickness is avoided. All prospective fathers should see to it that the expectant mother is provided with a bottle of "Mother's Friend."

If more convenient get a bottle on your way home. Remember that many of our most valuable aids to health and comfort and safety are only such when our knowledge of them is put into action. Begin early to suggest its use and "Mother's Friend" will soon become one of the most helpful influences ever devised for avoiding much of the distress incident to coming motherhood.

The directions are simple. Get it at any drug store. It is applied by the expectant mother herself. It penetrates deeply and affords quick and splendid relief in a most gratifying manner and reflects a physical betterment to the nervous disposition of the baby. Don't fail to get a bottle of "Mother's Friend" today and then write Bradford Regulator Co., 715 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a pretty little book brimful of information for expectant mothers. It is a delight to read it.

Child Problem.

No mother, through the passing of the ages, has been able to discover why bad manners are so catching and so fairly permanent when caught, while you may leave your sweet-spoken, grammatical child with a surly and ungrammatical one, and not even a proper word or a single "g" will rub off upon the one who needs it. What a lovely world it would be if righteousness and good manners were only as catching as unrighteousness and bad manners!—Mary Heaton Vorse in the Woman's Home Companion.

Men and Women.

A man can go his own way with much less opposition than a woman. And in that may be found the reason for the common opinion that men are more broad-minded than women.

Where She Drew the Line.

"Is the play one which you would permit your daughter to attend?" he asked of the lady who has been expounding her views on the necessity for handling vital topics in the drama. "Certainly," she replies, "but I wouldn't allow my son to see it."—Judge.

WHEN DAVID WORE A ROSE

By KEITH KENYON.

"I am sure I should like to know," said Elizabeth, "why David Hinckle has suddenly grown so chipper, actually wearing a rose in his button-hole!"

"You know what I'd say," responded Nellie, her maid. "I'd say that Mr. Hinckle was thinking of getting married. That's what it would generally mean."

"Nonsense," snapped Elizabeth. "Who ever heard of a confirmed old bachelor marrying and who on earth would have him anyway?"

Elizabeth was thirty-two, and of the type of tall brunette that, like the flowers of late summer, reveals its true loveliness only after springtime has passed.

"Do you know, Nellie," she said later in the day, addressing her only confidant—for Elizabeth lived alone in her ramshackle old home as David Hinckle lived in his—"do you know, I can't get over that rose that Mr. Hinckle was wearing this morning. Nellie, suppose you get on your things and go down to the florist's and get me a bunch of violets."

"Great Scott, Michael, but our neighbor is starting out with a big bunch of violets," David Hinckle was putting around in his garden—Elizabeth had taken good pains to time her exit accordingly—when she went forth late in the afternoon to make a call on the minister's wife. He spoke to old Michael, his man.

"You know what I'd say," said Michael. "I'd say Miss Elizabeth had a beau, and you needn't look so surprised either, Mr. David, for haven't I often been tellin' you she is a fine lookin' girl for all she's a bit reserved like."

The next morning David started out earlier than usual.

"Don't be surprised, Michael," he said, "if I come back with a new hat. This one is getting pretty shabby."

When Nellie's next cleaning day came around she chanced to meet old Mike at the back fence. "For goodness gracious sake, what's got into them?" she asked. "First I saw your Mr. David with a new hat on and then one day I saw Miss Elizabeth with her new hat—the milliner told me it cost fifteen dollars—and then the next day Mr. David was sporting a new overcoat and now Miss Elizabeth is off this morning having herself all done up at the hairdresser's, and I took a peek in her wardrobe and, goodness laws, but she's got a new Sunday dress and she told me before she went to come an extra day this week to help 'do up' the parlor curtains and things. She's got the piano open, which it hasn't been for years."

It was two weeks later that Miss Elizabeth made the announcement to Nellie that almost caused that good woman to upset the pail of hot soap-suds she was carrying.

"Nellie," she began, "I'm not content. I've decided I've got to do something, to be something, and you are the only soul in this whole place that I can talk to about it. I've decided to get my life insured and manage to borrow on that enough money to study. One thing I've got to do," Elizabeth went on, "I know in order to be able to borrow on a life insurance you have to get someone to vouch for you, and I don't know of anyone to ask but Mr. David."

When Elizabeth walked down the central street of the small town that afternoon more than one passer-by turned to look.

About this time David Hinckle started out, and something he said to Mike almost caused that worthy individual to snip his own fingers with the pruning scissors.

"I am going to attend to some important business. I've decided I've been a fool not to keep up my law practice."

It was that night that Elizabeth called on David and for the first time in four years shook hands with her neighbor. She explained the object of her errand. "I would sell my house and raise the money that way," she said, "only I have a fondness for the old place."

"And by the way, Miss Elizabeth, I heard when I was down town today that you were going to be married."

"And I heard the same thing about you. I hear that you were mortgaging your house in order to start in practice again."

"Yes, I am, but I swear I am not going to be married."

"I swear the same."

"But why shouldn't we?" David was wondering as he looked at his neighbor why he had never seen the beauty of her face before.

"But whom?" Elizabeth laughed. "No one ever marries here."

"We could marry each other, couldn't we?"

"Yes, we could do that," Elizabeth reflected, "and then you wouldn't have to mortgage your house, for I could sell mine."

"Bless your heart," laughed David. (Copyright, 1916, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Where "Hon." Means "Hon."

"The honorable," which title we use so loosely in the United States, has clearly defined usages in Great Britain, being borne by the "M. P.'s," judges of the high courts of justice when they are not peers, and all children of dukes, marquises, earls (except the oldest son, who has the title, "lord"), viccounts and barons.

SUIT FOR ACCOUNTING
FILED IN DIST. COURT

Through their attorneys, Bond & Melton, William Airington, Walter Airington and James Airington have filed suit in the district court of Grady county against Mrs. Willie Airington, Lonnie, Claude and Mike Airington, C. H. Hartsman, as guardian for Lonnie, Claude and Mike Airington, and C. H. Hartsman.

Plaintiffs, in their petition allege that they are half brothers of defendants; that defendant Mrs. Willie Airington, is their stepmother, having been the second wife of their father, B. F. Airington, now deceased; that the plaintiffs and the defendants, Lonnie, Claude and Mike Airington, are the children of the late B. F. Airington, deceased; that they are of Chickasaw blood; that defendants, Mrs. Willie Airington and C. H. Hartsman are citizens of the United States, but not of Indian blood; that these plaintiffs and the defendants, Mrs. Willie Airington and Lonnie, Claude and Mike Airington are the sole and only surviving heirs of B. F. Airington, deceased, who died during the year 1908, and as such heirs inherited, or should have inherited jointly the lands and possessions of the said B. F. Airington, deceased; that these lands, together with that portion of the estate which would have come to a brother, now deceased, are in the possession of defendants; that the defendants have collected the rents, etc., from the same since the death of B. F. Airington in the year 1908; that defendant, C. H. Hartsman is the father of Mrs. Willie Airington; that the plaintiffs are entitled to an accounting and a division of the lands.

Plaintiffs therefore pray, in their petition that the court direct the plaintiffs to make an accounting to them in court; that a receiver be appointed; that an accounting of the rents collected by the defendants, as alleged by the plaintiffs, be made; that a decree be made "forever settling, establishing and quieting the title of the parties herein and to said lands and a decree of partition be granted."

PRICE OF SHOES WILL BE HIGHER

By United Press.
CLEVELAND, O., March 16.—The price of shoes is going up, according to wholesale dealers. The boost will be caused by sharp advances in the cost of raw materials, as a result of the war.

"With the manufacturers it is not a question of price so much as a scarcity of raw material," stated G. P. Spencer, wholesaler. "Many have not been able to buy more than half the amount they need." While imports of calf skin have decreased 55 per cent, exports have increased 100 per cent. The total exports of leather and tanned skins increased heavily last year, while imports of cattle hides have decreased. As a result women's shoes soles have increased 50 per cent in cost and men's 33-1-3 per cent. Some vicikid is being sold at 75 cents a square foot. Even shoe laces have advanced 300 per cent."

This unprecedented situation is caused by: 1, enormous demands by warring nations for soldiers' shoes, 2, shutting off supplies of leather from Germany and Serbia; 3, England's embargo upon all leathers of the first and second grades from her colonial domains; 4, the Mediterranean situation which cuts off Indian trade.

Mystery!
How is it that a maniacal convict can escape unharmed by leaping from a train running at the rate of 30 miles an hour, when every time the average citizen slips in alighting from a car he injures himself so severely that the railway company must pay him big damages?
