CHIEF SAYS SPEEDERS SLACK UP

Chief Phillips stated this morning that he believed the traffic ordinance, which has remained a dead letter upon the city's statute books practically ever since its enactment, was being observed today better than ever before. The chief said that he and his men had been doing a bit of pussy-footing for the past several days and that the matter of speeding within the city limits was reduced to the minimum. He stated that he fully expected to see all auto drivers comply with the stopping, or safety first provisions required by the ordinance at Ninth street and Kansas and Chickasha avenues, without the police having first to resort to drastic measures.

Yesterday and today Chief Phillips has been riding the street cars, especially in the down town districts, and dropping off at every stop the cars make in order to see that that provision of the traffic ordinance, which requires all autos, and other vehicles, to stop and remain standing while the cars are discharging and receiving passengers, is complied with.

It is understood that at the recent meeting of the city council a movement was agitated which was calculated to lead to the abolishment, or the repeal of the traffic ordinance as it now stands on the city's law books. A vote of six to two said that the ordinance should remain, while the consensus of opinion of the councilmen was that the police chief and his patrolmen be instructed to see to it that the ordinance should be enforced from now on.

It was stated this morning, by a leading member of the city council, that the enforcement of the ordinance, or its repeal, as discussed at the meeting of Thursday evening, probably had a great deal to do with the passing of definite action upon the motorcycle-cop matter, one member of the council alleging at the time he would favor the hiring of a motorcycle cop only with the proviso that all other officers be laid off; that the present force was amply sufficient, he thought, to see to the enforcement of the ordinance.

Another member of the council stated this morning that there could be no reason advanced why the city of Chickasha should not retain the traffic ordinance upon its statute books, nor could a reason be advanced why that ordinance should not and could not be enforced.

To Promote Safety.

The newest museum in New York is called the American Museum of Safety. It contains collections of models, charts and photographs, actual machines safeguarded in full size, together with models of safety devices and sanitary appliances. The museum is free to the public. By special arrangement it is open in the evenings to classes and societies. The activities of the museum of safety are devoted to the safety, health and welfare of industrial workers and the advancement of the science of industry. The society gives yearly medals to those which make notable achievements in devices for the security of human life, and to firms that make notable progress in the promotion of hygiene and the mitigation of occupational disease in their industry, and to railroads that promote safety for the traveling public.

Japanese Turn to Dye Making.

The Japanese are apparently going to take up dye making, now that German products cannot be obtained and the plan has been taken up by private enterprise, assisted by government. A number of business men were invited to the department of agriculture and commerce one day lately and shown the draft law for the encouragement of the manufacture of dyes and dyestuffs. The vice-minister of agriculture and commerce reported particulars regarding the encouragement law, and invited those present to give their views, without reserve, regarding the establishment of a company. It was subsequently decided that those present should consider the matter, and give their views later.

WAR NEWS WAS PRINTED ON SINGLE SHEET OF WALL PAPER DURING SIEGE OF VICKSBURG

J. F. Bishop, of Chickasha, is the owner of an old paper which in its way is a curiosity which grows more valuable every day. It is a copy of the "Daily Citizen," published at Vicksburg, Miss., during the period that city was invested by the Union forces under General Grant during the civil war.

The Daily Citizen, issue July 2, 1863, was a one page, four column affair, printed on wall paper, and filled with nothing but news of the war, particularly of the siege of Vicksburg. While it purports to be issued daily, yet the copy in Mr. Bishop's possession shows that sometimes several days were required in which to get out one issue. For instance in one paragraph of this issue it says, "ON THE 4th of July, the great Ulysses, the Yankee Generalissimo, surnamed Grant, has expressed his intention of dining in Vicksburg on Sunday next and celebrating the 4th of July by a grand dinner and so forth. Ulysses must get into the city before he dines in it. The way to cook a rabbit is first to catch the rabbit," while at the foot of the last column appears this: "NOTE—July 4th, 1863. Two days bring about great changes. The banner of the Union floats over Vicksburg. Gen. Grant has 'caught the rabbit'; he has dined in Vicksburg, and he did bring his dinner with him. The Citizen lives to see it. For the last time it appears on 'Wall Paper,' no more will it enliven the luxury of mule meat and fricasseee kites, urge Southern warriors to such diet forevermore. This is the last wallpaper Citizen, and is, excepting this note, from the types as we found them. It will be valuable hereafter as a curiosity."

The Citizen carried no advertising. Its news paragraphs are of almost gruesome interest, telling as they do of the sufferings of the people of the invested city; telling of the screaming shells passing over and through the city, and bursting upon the streets at all hours of the day and night; telling how citizens died from shell wounds; telling of the sacrifice of citizens who "have plenty of corn, more than necessary to last through the siege, portioned of what was thought would last through the brief time before the arrival of succor to our garrison, and since that time have relieved the wants of many families free of charge."

In one column appears a touching story of the manner in which the infant daughter of Col. and Mrs. Pelligrew was christened. "Entering his wife's room shortly after the birth of his little daughter, Col. Pelligrew said, 'She is indeed a soldier's child; she has been born amid the roar of cannon, the clash of arms and the uncertainty of battle. The fortunes of war are to be likened unto a coquette, and we will name her 'Coquette' in memory of this awful struggle.' In another column appears the story of the "Death of Col. Pelligrew." After telling of the manner in which the officer met his death while leading a skirmishing party outside the city, the Citizen says: "His devoted wife, carrying her infant child, 'Coquette,' in her arms, crossed to the Yankee lines at night, hoping she might find her husband and bring him succor should he be living. She has not returned and it is believed the whole family has perished."

Another news item tells of the manner in which Mrs. Cisco was killed on the Jackson road, and says "Mrs. Cisco's husband is now in Virginia, a member of the Moody's artillery."

Following this news item appears a semi-humorous story of the editor's dining with "Major Gillespie on Confederate beef, alias mule meat."

The name of the editor does not appear at any place in the newspaper and as told by the cold types, set up on the 4th of July, evidently by the fingers of some blue-clad type who had come as a conqueror over the "Johnny" compositor, "it will be valuable hereafter as a curiosity."

CRALLE MEETS MISFORTUNES

In three short paragraphs, each paragraph properly punctuated with a period, may be told a tale of woe by M. S. Cralle, member of the school board and leading fisherman of Chickasha. The paragraph, printed, would read, "Lost the Lunch." Caught no Fish. "Monkeyed with the Bandsaw."

The first paragraph, and the second paragraph, tell the history of a fishing trip made a short time ago by a party of which Mr. Cralle was one of the leading spirits. Mr. Cralle was the official lunch bearer of the party, and as such it fell to him to drive out to the scene of the piscatorial adventures with hampers filled with bread and butter and pickles and jams and jellies and corn meal—in which to fry the fish—and thermos bottles of hot coffee and cold tea. Cralle got the lunch to the creek's bank and then went down to see why the Samuel Hill someone had not caught some fish. An interview with J. F. Bishop, a member of the party, being non-productive of information, it was decided to eat the lunch without the fish. Adjournment was taken to the car wherein Mr. Cralle had left the hampers of good things.

But alas, alack, and again alas. Someone had swiped the sandwiches, the pies, the cakes, the jellies, the pickles, the silverware and the thermos receptacles of liquids. And a search failed to locate the stolen provender.

It was while tramping about in the weeds along the creek's bank, searching for the purloined edibles and at a coteras that Mr. Cralle monkeyed with the bandsaw. The bandsaw consisted of divers and numerous sprigs of poison oak which the gentleman fingered and permitted to brush across his features.

And today, swathed in bandages, his eyes looking the worse for wear, his features distorted and swollen and varnished with lotions of vaseline and cold cream, and with an appetite unimpaired with a fish diet, Mr. Cralle swings in the hammock and abuses Harry Hayes, the man who told him there might be fish which might be caught, but told him not of grub thieves bold and poison oak bad.

The Boy is Father to the Man

Old sayings like this are fraught with a most important meaning. And what will add the expectant mother in conserving her health, her strength, her mental repose and the absence of vexatious pains is a subject of vast moment. Among the recognized helps is a splendid remedy known as "Mother's Friend." Applied to the muscles it sinks its way deeply to relax them, firm and pliant, it thus lifts the strain on ligaments that produce pain, it lightens the burden on the nervous system, induces calm, restful nights of health-giving sleep and makes the days sunny and happy. Get a bottle of "Mother's Friend" of any druggist and you will then realize why it has been considered true to its name in our best homes through three generations. It is perfectly harmless but so effective that once used it is recommended to all expectant mothers by those who went through the ordeal with surprising ease. By writing to Bradball's Regulator Co., 712 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., you can have a free copy of a wonderful book that unravels those things which all expectant mothers delight to read. Write today.

It is mailed free. Among its features are an explanation of the remedy's action, the first pulsations, prepartory uneasiness, date of expectancy, how to be comfortable, and a great variety of topics all bearing upon the one subject of expectant motherhood. Then there are many letters which describe actual experiences, making of it a guide book of great value. Don't fail to write for this book.
