HIS DOLLARS AND CENTS
By FLORA A. MONTY.

"A frump of a schoolteacher! No use! I'll not be extra nice to her," fretted a thin, high-pitched male voice.

Beth, shrunk into an alcove of the garden wall and deliberately listened.

"Oh, come, Benson! She's not a frump. As to her being a teacher, she doesn't spread it on, and she's absolutely human, and alive to a good time." Beth smiled thankfully. Ned Gretson's tones as well as his words dulled the rasp of the other.

"So much the worse. She'll be alive to my money, and I won't be safe from her a minute. That's the trouble of a fellow who is born to wealth."

"Well, I understand that there'll be one woman of your class here—Miss Mary Lange, who is struggling through life trying to spend the millions her father left her."

Beth left her hiding place, unobserved, and indignantly made her way to her room.

She chose her loveliest gown for her appearance at dinner that evening. A soft wistaria-colored tulle enveloped her with regal grace and her golden hair made a shining aureole to crown it all.

Now, the few ideas that were born in James Benson's mind passed through such a "moneyed" atmosphere that he simply could not grasp the fact that wealth and beauty were not synonymous. So when Beth and Mary simultaneously were introduced he listened not for names, but delivered himself of a reverential bow to the wistaria-gowned teacher and an icy nod to Mary. He was so volubly affable throughout dinner, regardless of Beth's reserve, that she was bewildered, until in the course of the conversation he addressed her as "My dear Miss Lange."

Later in the evening James Benson directed at Beth a fatuous look and lisped, "Miss Lange, do let me show you the garden by moonlight!" Beth met his look with a disinterested stare, and then turned away, while his right arm was seized with an insistent clutch, and, with a gratified smiler, the real Miss Lange accepted his offer.

In the days that followed, the young millionaire admitted to himself with what he considered as liberal condescension the fact that Beth was not a frump and that she was really entertaining. And, finally, he became aware of the fact that Ned Gretson, who had nothing but his good looks and a small salary—though he came of a fine old family—was carefully including Beth in all that he planned and did.

On the day of the picnic, she was to go in the launch with Benson, but she developed a violent headache as the boat was about to leave and remained at the house. Shortly after the picnic people had assembled on the island, Ned took the canoe in which he had made the trip alone and started back to the house—a proceeding which aroused a deep disquietude in what Benson was pleased to regard as his heart. Very deliberately, the latter re-entered the launch, and put about across the bay, arriving at the Edmond wharf some time before Ned reached it.

As he expected, Beth was wandering about in the garden, gaily singing, her face showing no vestige of illness.

"Er—is your headache better?"

"Perfectly well, thank you." She displayed no pleasure at his presence.

"I'm so glad! Really, I am. I'm quite interested in all that concerns you." Benson was trying his best to be convincing.

Beth's unbelieving smile irritated him, and he seized her hands. "It's the truth, I assure you. It's a shame for you to work for a living. You don't have to, you know. You can marry me. None of our family ever married a poor girl before, but I'm quite fond of you. Shall we announce it to the others when they return?"

Beth's eyes blazed. "No," she answered bluntly.

"You mean that there's someone else?"

"Yes."

"Someone you learned to care for here?"

"No, someone I met long before."

"I'm thankful for that!" Once more his voice had that familiar grating rasp. "I was afraid it might be Gretson."

He glared at her for a moment, and then strode furiously down the path, and soon the launch was shooting through the water again.

Beth turned to find Ned back of her. "I listened," he said. "But, tell me, was that the truth—about Cinderella having found her fairy prince before coming here?"

"Yes—it is true," very softly.

"He—he's in luck," was the unsteady response. "He's in luck! How much I never knew till this minute."

"Beth—do you mean—you said—"

"I said I met him before I came here, and I did. I met you a whole year before that."

M'KINNEY TAKEN TO MUSKOGEE
Selects Women as Prey and is Content with $25 Transactions; Bound Over on Serious Offense

Deputy United States Marshal Jim Dillon left yesterday afternoon for Muskogee, having in charge Sampson McKinney, a husky Chickasaw Indian who was bound over in Commissioner Hamilton's court yesterday in the sum of $1,000, which bond he was unable to give despite the fact of good connections whom he claimed would come to his rescue. McKinney is a man glib of speech and with plausible tales. With two serious charges facing him he told the officer who first detained him that there was nothing to the charge except that a certain judge had it in for him and wished to have him detained in order to give him some annoyance. He seemed entirely unconcerned over his fate. He declined to say on the witness stand whether he had ever served a term at Muskogee but later intimated that such was the case.

The charge on which he was bound over yesterday was one which subjects him to a heavy fine or imprisonment.

Representing himself to be an agent of the land department he visited Mrs. I. W. Williams, wife of a former deputy United States marshal who is now on the road and told her that he would look up a dead heir claim, and get for her the money which was coming from it. He also assured her he would expedite other matters before that office.

Later he returned to Mrs. Williams' home and, stating that his expense check had not arrived and that he was accidentally caught without funds she advanced him $25. Mrs. Williams arrived here yesterday and testified against the daring Indian.

McKinney seems to select women as his prey.

EXTREME WEAKNESS AND SUFFERING
Read How Mrs. Goodling got Relief and Strength.

York, Pa.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be all you say it is. I was so sick that I could not stand at my sink to wash dishes and I could not sit without a pillow under me. I had the doctor every few days but since I have taken the Compound I don't have to send for him. I have had three children and could not raise any of them, but since I have taken the Compound I have a bright baby boy. I advise every suffering woman to try it and get relief. It has done wonders for me."—Mrs. CATHARINE GOODLING, 133 E. King Street, York, Pa.

When a medicine has been successful in bringing health to so many, no woman has a right to say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." There must be more than a hundred thousand women in this country who, like Mrs. Goodling, have proven what wonders Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can do for weak and ailing women. Try it and see for yourself.

If there are any complications you don't understand, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

WASHINGTON CO. PLANS TO BUILD CONCRETE ROAD

Bartlesville, Okla., Sept. 29.—Henry J. Holm is circulating the petition for the calling of the election to vote bonds for the construction of the concrete highway from the Kansas state line to the Tulsa county line, the road and plans having been approved by the Washington County Good Roads association.

Regarding this road some interesting data has been dug up by County Clerk Mitchell, which shows that by voting the bonds the county tax payers will be saving money, even from the start.

With this year the last of the bonds for the road will have been paid off and this will take one and seven-tenths mills off the levy.

For the maintenance of county and state roads last year a levy of 1.83 mills was voted, producing a revenue of $75,000, which was spent on the county highways.

By voting twenty year bonds for the construction of a concrete highway, as planned, but $30,000 a year will be necessary for the sinking fund and for the first year but $5,000, as $25,000 will come from the state and government. The maintenance cost on the concrete road would be but a very small item as compared with the present cost of dragging, grading, etc.

The road and bridge fund for the county was $30,000 last year and, with the bridges constructed, this will be practically done away with, only a sufficient levy to paint and repair bridges being necessary and the county levy would be not in excess of two mills next year.

Trs figures of Mr. Mitchell show that to build the concrete road and maintain it, the cost would be far less than keeping up the present dirt roads and the first concrete paved highway in the state would be the result, with a road that would be a credit to any state and at a saving to tax payers.

RAIDS ON PRIZE RING FOR ARMY
Movies, Fight Clubs and Amusement Parks Furnish Involuntary Recruits for Great War

by United Press.
London, Sept. 29.—He's a slippery slacker who escapes the army since the police and military authorities began raiding the movies, fight clubs and amusement parks for eligible citizens. Over 300 fight fans paved the air at the Ring, a leading swat pavior, when the place was raided for army material. An hour later a good number of them were in khaki. Included in the surprise draft were a half a dozen preliminary boys and a couple of semi-windup fighters who'll have a chance to try their jabs on the Germans this winter.

The ticket lines at the movie houses are the delight of the conscription agents. Every show has its line of patrons waiting for tickets because with the big "iron" pennies it takes a good ticket chopper about two minutes to sell an admission. When the line least suspects difficulty the military authorities sneak up and grab all eligible-looking men. Those who can show adequate papers are allowed to go; the others get the long haul to the police station—and khaki.

THOMPSON WILL SPEAK HERE TUES.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 29.—Hon. William J. Bryan will be able to give but one day to Oklahoma speaking at Enid at 10 a. m. on October 10th, at Perry at 2 p. m. and at Ponca City at 8. After the Ponca City address he leaves for Denver.

Congressman Joe B. Thompson has been assigned to speak at Bartlesville Friday, the 29th, at Tulsa for a night meeting, at Wagoner Saturday afternoon, and at Muskogee at night. Monday afternoon Thompson speaks at Ada, at night at Shawnee, Tuesday afternoon at Chickasha, Hobart at night, Mangum Wednesday afternoon and Elk City at night. October 5th, 6th and 7th will be spent in the northwestern part of the state.

Governor Robt. L. Williams will speak at the fair at Muskogee Tuesday afternoon, that being Governor's day. There will be a smoker or banquet Tuesday evening at which the governor will probably talk some politics. Friday the governor will spend in Craig county to be billed by the local committee, and on Saturday he will speak in Delaware county, probably making several speeches there under the direction of the local committee. The following week Governor Williams will make a tour of the western and southwestern part of the state.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Assertions that irreparable drought damage had been done in Argentina carried the wheat market sharply up today regardless of reports that Greece had joined the Anglo-French allies. The market, although unsettled at the close, was 2 1-8c to 2 3-4c net higher, with December and May both at $1.54 7-8. Corn gained 1-2c to 1 1-8c and oats 1-4c and 3-8c to 5-8c. In provisions the outcome ranged from 5 cents decline to 40c advance.

New York Cotton.
New York, Sept. 28.—The cotton market was quiet again today but an opening decline was followed by rallies and the close was steady, net 2 points lower to 2 higher. January contracts advanced from 16.05c to 16.15c and closed at 16.13c.
