EIGHT IMPORTANT RULES

- Save wisely, but not too well. Don't turn patriotism into parsimony.
- Remember that a nation fights on its stomach.
- Eat less, but not too little. Substitute rather than starve; eat less meat, but more fish; eat less wheat bread, but more corn bread.
- Save the canned food—the army needs it.
- Save the fat, but keep a balanced menu. Don't waste!

Fruit Toast.

Cut slices of bread into fancy shapes and dip in a mixture which has been made by heating one well beaten egg, one-half cupful of milk and a pinch of salt. Fry or saute the bread in a little batter until prettily browned; then remove to a platter, spreading the pieces out separately, and place a spoonful of jelly or fruit on each piece. Cover each with whipped cream to which has been added powdered sugar and vanilla.

Growing Cautious.

"Aren't you the man who used to stand around and tell how the government ought to be run?" "Yes," replied the self-confident person.

"Why haven't you anything to say now?" "I'm afraid that if I dig up any good suggestions now, some German spy will grab 'em and give Berlin the benefit of them before I can get them put across in Washington."

Sure Enough Family Pride.

"Ribbs seems all puffed up with conceit." "Case of family pride." "Ancestors?" "No. He has a boy in the army."
