Agrarian.

A truthful man tells of a farmer in his state who even in the hour of adversity could think of others. An unseasonable frost had completed the damage done by the insects to his potatoes. The tops of the plants which had served as a pasturage for his pigs were wholly destroyed.

Meeting him at the postoffice one day a friend asked:

"How are you Tom? Things go in well?"

"Goin' well!" exclaimed the old man. "I should say not! There's trouble and plenty of it! Why, up at my place there's 8,000,000 potatoes an' nothin' for them to eat."

Pride.

"I pride myself upon the fact that I never have gone home in a condition that made me fear to face my wife at the door."

"What about that time when several of your friends had to carry you inside after they had lifted you from the back?"

"Well, I wasn't afraid to meet my wife at the door or anywhere else."

It was evening. He and she were seated in her father's room burning her father's gas.

"Answer me, Angelina," he cried, in a voice full of passionate earnestness. "Answer me! I can bear this suspense no longer."

"Answer him, Angelina," came a voice through the keyhole. "Answer him! I can bear this suspense no longer."

"Have you an opening here for me?" asked the assertive young man.

"Yes," answered the manager. "It's right behind you."

Pat's Ingratitude.

Two Irishmen were navigating the rough seas of Randolph street the other night, finding it anything but smooth sailing. One of them, who seemed to have a trifle less aboard than the other, was supporting his friend, evidently against his will. The latter was sobbing like a child.

"Why, Pat," he cried, trying to wrench himself loose from that gentleman's grasp: "Pat, me boy, what have I ever done to ye that ye want me to fight ye?"—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Not On the Map.

Mrs. Norman had a maid, Jane, who had a lover in the army. One day, after receiving a letter from him, she sought her mistress and asked if she might see a map. A while after she returned to Mrs. Norman again and said she could not find the place where her lover was.

"Where is it, do you say, Jane?" asked the mistress.

"Durandville," replied Jane, after another careful perusal of the letter.

Mrs. Norman searched the map, but no such place could be found.

"Jane," she said, "please let me see the part of the letter which gives the name of the place where he is."

Jane complied, and Mrs. Norman read: "I am in durance vile, but hope soon to be sent home."

A darky mammy, arriving at the court house the other morning to transact some probate business, inquired of a bystander in the lobby where she might find the officer desired. "Right in there, mammy," said Doll Fausett, pointing to the door leading to the county attorney's office. Putting her head inside the door the old mammy called out: "Am dis de office ob de judge ob reprobrates?"

A Great Race.

Two globe trotters met in the smoking room of a hotel. They found that they had each spent a week in China, on the strength of which they proceeded to "weigh in" that country to their mutual admiration and satisfaction.

From that the talk drifted to sporting events witnessed in different parts of the world.

"While I was in Australia," said No. 1, "I saw what I imagined to be the closest race in the world. The winning horse only beat the second by a tongue's length."

No. 2 seemed lost in thought. He gazed abstractedly out of the window. At last he spoke:

"I have seen a closer race than that," he murmured. "I was once in Scotland."

Decisive Battles.

Some married men will contend that "The Five Decisive Battles of the World" will never be complete until a few domestic scraps are added to the volume.

A man's animosity toward a political opponent is sometimes so bitter that it does not cease even when the opponent is dead.

A gentleman who had figured prominently suddenly came to the end of a long and useful life. On the day of the funeral one of the strongest political enemies of the deceased was asked:

"Are you going to attend Mr. — a funeral today?"

"No," responded the distinguished gentleman, deliberately, "but I wish you to understand I heartily approve of it."

"Where can I see some of the latest effects in spring bonnets?"

"Our stocking department is two aisles to the left," replied the floor walker, courteously. "We also have musical comedy in our theaters on the roof."

In a primary room the teacher pointed out the letter O and asked little Johnny what it was. He answered correctly. The teacher then pointed to C.

"Now, what letter is this?"

"The same, only somebody hit it."

NOTICE.—UNITED STATES LAND Office, Salt Lake City, Utah, July 23, 1914. To Whom It May Concern: Notice is hereby given that the state of Utah has filed in this office lists of lands, selected by the said state, under Section 6 of the act of congress, approved July 16, 1894, as indemnity school lands, viz: E $\frac{1}{2}$ SE $\frac{1}{4}$, Sec. 5, T. 14 S., R. 10 E., Serial 612892. E $\frac{1}{2}$ SW $\frac{1}{4}$, NW $\frac{1}{4}$ SE $\frac{1}{4}$, Sec. 22; E $\frac{1}{2}$ NW $\frac{1}{4}$, W $\frac{1}{2}$ NE $\frac{1}{4}$, Sec. 27, T. 11 S., R. 15 E., Serial 612890.

Copies of said lists, so far as they relate to said tracts by descriptive subdivisions, have been conspicuously posted in this office for inspection by any person interested and by the public generally.

During the period of publication of this notice, or any time thereafter, and before final approval and certification under departmental regulations of April 25, 1907, protests or contests against the claim of the state to any of the tracts or subdivisions hereinbefore described, on the ground that the same is more valuable for mineral than for agricultural purposes will be received and noted for report to the general land office at Washington, D. C. Failure so to protest or contest, within the time specified, will be considered sufficient evidence of the non-mineral character of the tracts and the selections thereof, being otherwise free from objection, will be approved to the state.
