A FOUL MURDER.

A Favorite Utah Boy the Victim

THE CZAR'S CONDITION.

He is Very Low but Still Living—He May Spend the Winter in Southern Russia—New York Democracy is United for Senator Hill.

BUTTE, MONT., Oct. 5.—Chauncey W. West, conductor on the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific, was fatally shot this morning by Clay Pugh, a tramp, whom he put off the train for stealing a ride. Pugh comes from Iowa. He was arrested.

West's family consisting of a wife, three daughters and a son, were brought to Butte on a special from Anaconda and were at his bedside continuously.

West made a dying statement to the prosecuting attorney to the effect that when his train pulled out of Butte he found Pugh stealing a ride and put him off. After the train had proceeded several miles he discovered that Pugh had again jumped on the train, then he slowed up and ordered him (Pugh) off. The fellow refused and became abusive and West struck him with his fist. Pugh then walked away and West turned to go into the caboose, when Pugh exclaimed: "You — — I'll fix you," and fired two shots. Both shots took effect in the back, one on the right and the best of the spine. One penetrated the stomach, and West has been vomiting blood.

Of all the numerous murders committed in Butte, none has created so much feeling as this. The town is greatly excited, and many threats of lynching were heard this morning.

Groups of railroad men gathered on the street corners, and they needed but a resolute leader to carry out their vengeance.

Mr. West is one of the best known and best liked railroad men in Montana, and has many large business interests throughout the state. He was once a resident of Ogden, son of Bishop West.

CONDITION OF THE CZAR.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Vienna correspondent of the Telegraph says he learns from a trustworthy diplomatic source that the condition of the czar is hopeless. The temporary improvement is only possible by a complete abandonment of state business. His majesty is conscious of his condition and has been engaged lately in writing a sort of political testament.

Sr. EPPRESEN, it is stated the czar is suffering from extreme weakness, but he is not confined to his bed. If he is too weak to go to Corin in December he will spend the winter in Southern Russia.

WILL SUPPORT HILL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Chairman Hinckley, of the democratic state committee, said:

"As the situation stands, I can not emphatically state that the regular democratic ticket will receive the support of the Cleveland faction. As to whether Secretary Lamont came over with orders from the administration to restore harmony both in the city and state, I am not at liberty to say, but I can tell you that I am positively assured that the administration men in Washington desire most earnestly the success of the regular democratic ticket headed by Senator Hill. I can also state to you that Judge W. J. Gaynor will, without doubt, appear on the state ticket as the nominee for the court of appeals. The administration at large and all its supporters realize that the honor of the democracy is now at stake, and for that purpose they are willing to make every concession in the interest of securing democratic success this fall. It is no longer a question with the administration men of personality, but old democracy."

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich.: "I am permitted to make this extract: 'I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results.' Trial bottles free at Simons' Drug Co. Regular size 50c. and $1.00."

A JOINT DEBATE.

Judge Powers Challenges "Judge Goodwin and the Letter has Accepted.

Judge Powers in a very witty letter to Judge Goodwin yesterday says: "I make a proposition to you. It is this: That you and I meet at some time most convenient to you, and at some place that shall be determined to be the most inconvenient to the public, and that we then and there, with malice aforethought and with premeditation, discuss the question: "Resolved, That it is to the interest of the mass of the people that the democratic party should succeed."

Judge Goodwin replied in a letter equally as humorous, accepting the challenge upon any date after October 17th provided Judge Powers will occupy only fifty minutes in opening, give Goodwin fifty minutes, and then take only fifteen minutes to close, leaving him all the time that inter-poses between then and election to "do" Judge Powers in the columns of the Tribune.

BOUGHT FREEDOM WITH DEATH.

Nez Perce Heroes Followed Their Leader Over the Cliff.

The hardy little Nez Perce horse is quite well known in a way, but few people know what remarkable courage and sagacity he has. When the Indian war swept the Nez Perce country, the Indians gathered about 5,000 horses into a valley that fronted on the steep bluffs of the Columbia river, and there, with the great white mountains at their back, prepared to make their last desperate stand.

In the battle that followed they were defeated, and the small fraction of them that remained unkilld put to flight. The horses, shut in by the steep mountains on the one side and the steep river bluff on the other, had to be left behind.

When the battle had closed, the soldiers of the volunteers (for only a part were regulars) made a rush for the horses, but they could not lay hands on one of them or approach them.

And now for the first time it was noticed that they were under a boy herder. The boy was unarmed, entirely naked and as red as copper.

The boy had no bridle, but wove his hands into the mane, and thus guided his black horse at will at the head of the herd.

The volunteers dropped on their knees here and there around the edge of the circle and began to fire at the boy. At last a bullet struck him. His body flew high into the air and then fell and rolled in the dust.

The horses now divided as they came by. Their nostrils were distended at the smell of blood, and their eyes ablaze at the sight of their young keeper in the dust.

On the second round, after the boy fell, the black leader seemed to run sideways, his eyes centered to his little dead master until they looked frightful from under the black mane.

He plunged on around and came to the very edge of the beetling basalt bluff. Then there was a sight as of a sculptured image of a horse poised in midair, and a mad, wild cry, such as a horse makes but once—a cry indescribable—that filled the valley.

Men looked away, and when they looked back the black steed was gone. Then, faithful to the leader, over the bluff into the foaming white water went another horse.

And then 10, 50, 500, the whole 5,000! Not one of all the herd was left to the invading victors, and the stream was literally choked with the dead.—Joaquin Miller.

PORTLAND'S SMALLEST HOUSE.

Three Rooms Crowded Into Space Not Large For One.

For upward of 10 years Portland has had within its corporate limits one of the smallest dwelling houses in this broad land of ours. At first glance it might be mistaken for a playhouse, as it stands alone in the center of the block on Northrup street, between Nineteenth and Twentieth.

The place has a history, and many of Portland's residents have made themselves familiar with it by personal inquiry and investigation. About 10 years ago, so the story goes, a seafaring man happened in the northwest portion of the city before streets had been opened and graded, and, struck by the beauty of the surroundings, determined to build himself an abode in which to pass his declining years.

The builder endeavored to make his home as much like ships' quarters as possible, and in this he succeeded admirably. The house contains three rooms—kitchen, dining room and bedroom—and occupies a patch of ground about 10 by 12 feet. It stands about 9 feet in height. The kitchen is just large enough to accommodate a cook stove and table, and the dining room is sufficiently large to allow two persons to move about. The parlor and bedroom combined contains a couch, two chairs and a table and resembles the stateroom of an ocean steamer. The bed, or berth, is located three or four feet above the floor on a chest of drawers and is hidden from view by handsome lace draperies. By lowering a panel on the opposite side of the room a bright array of china ware is exposed to view, and the panel itself may be used as a table or writing shelf.—Portland Telegram.

"I am not a very good shot," said R. B. Coleman, "and this fact gave me a great deal of trouble at one time. I borrowed a valuable dog from a friend and went hunting. The animal became rattled when he found that I knew nothing about hunting. Rabbit after rabbit was started up, and I missed them as fast as they came. Finally the dog grew tired and concluded to catch them on his own hook. He soon started another, and as it jumped the dog jumped after it just as I fired. The shot went into the head of the dog, and he died without a groan. The rabbit ran a short distance and then stopped and looked back, as if to mock me. Of course I paid for the dog, but my friend has never forgiven me, and I have not seen him since."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Ladies Like It Too.

PROVO CITY, Oct. 5, 1894.—This is to certify that we have been using a Home Comfort steel range No. 64, manufactured by the Wrought Iron Range company of St. Louis Missouri for the past six months, and we find it to be just as was represented in every particular by the salesman. A first class cooker, uniform baker, very easy to manage and very economical in fuel. We would not part with it for any other range we know of and we consider it one of the best investments that we have made for an article for domestic use.

REMARKABLE TREES.

Some of the More Striking Curiosities of Plant Life.

On the Canary Island grows a fountain tree, a tree most needed in some parts of the island. It is said that the leaves constantly distill enough water to furnish drink to every living creature in Hiero, nature having provided this remedy for the drought of the island. Every morning near this part of the island a cloud or mist arises from the sea which the winds force against the steep cliff on which the tree grows, and it is from the mist that the tree distills the water.

China, too, claims her remarkable tree. This is known as the tallow tree, so called from the fact of its producing a substance like tallow, and which serves the same purpose, is of the same consistence, color and smell. On the island of Lo-Choo grows a tree, about the size of a common cherry tree, which possesses the peculiarity of changing the color of its blossoms. At one time the flower assumes the tint of the lily, and again shortly takes the color of the rose. In Tibet there is a curious tree known as the tree of the thousand images. Its leaves are covered with well defined characters of the Tibetan alphabet. It is of great age and the only one of its kind known there.

The cocolab tree is considered one of the most wonderful of the vegetable kingdom. It appears that nothing can kill this tree; hence it reaches an astonishing age as well as enormous size. The natives make a strong cord from the fibers of the bark; hence the trees are continually barked, but without damage, as they soon put forth a new bark. It appears impervious to fire, and even the ax is resisted, as it continues to grow in length while it is lying on the ground.

In Mexico there is a plant known by the name of palo de leche. It belongs to the family of euphorbia. The Indians throw the leaves into the water, and the fish become stupefied and rise to the surface and are then caught by the natives. In this case the effect of the narcotic soon passes off. The milk of this plant thrown upon the fire gives out fumes that produce nausea and headache. The milk taken internally is a deadly poison. It will produce death or insanity, according to the size of the dose. There is a popular belief among the lower class in Mexico that the insanity of the ex-Empress Carlotta was caused by this poison.—San Jose Mercury.
