THE VERDICT'S LESSON.

At the risk of becoming tiresome to one class of our readers, we again and in a little more formal way refer to the verdict in the Brown-Tribune suit lately rendered. Sometimes newspapers after a long and successful career become arrogant and overbearing. When this happens they are apt to do and say things which are very irritating, and one needs to have a good deal of patience to avoid being unjust to them. As long as a paper is battling upon a principle, a little personal castigation is not only tolerated but it is relished by the masses of the people. But when a paper assumes that it alone is right, that it alone has feelings to be respected, it is in a fair way to do those feelings lacerated or very sadly wounded in some other way. The Tribune's life has been a very turbulent one. It has been in the past a very belligerent paper. It has fought many a hard battle but it has now to learn that there is a vast difference between waging a warfare upon a class, and upon an individual. It has fought the Mormon church and people so long, so bitterly and so successfully, we may add, that battle is necessary to the full enjoyment of its usual journalistic health. While the Mormon people and church perhaps did not fight back as Arthur Brown did, yet they resented its attacks nonetheless bitterly because they made no outer sound. The Tribune is really a great and useful paper, but it has not all the excellence in the territory, nor does it possess all the invincible power it thinks it does. There is no telling how much its past ball-doing methods entered into the Brown verdict. Its curses are but coming home to roost, in this case.

Perhaps this $3,500 will not prove a bad investment if the lesson is taken to heart and applied. If it serves to soften the asperities of partisanship and induces a milder and more tolerant spirit, the field of the Tribune's usefulness will be broadened, and its power for good will be largely increased. We glory in the Tribune's ability and feel proud of it. We always reckon it as one of the great merits of the territory, and but for the fact that it is disregarding of the interests and feelings of others when aroused many people would gather to it in deep sympathy now since the evil days have overtaken it. But such is not the case, as it is. Few there are but will say "served it right."

Mr. Brown may have said bitter things of it, probably did, but Mr. Brown is not a newspaper. His words do not live and bear fruit after many days. No matter how rich or powerful the individual may be, yet he is no match for any, even the weakest paper, and it is considered cowardice in a paper to be too ready to use this power where the other party is not provided with equal weapons of attack or defense. The verdict, if it renders the Tribune more careful in the future in dealing with individuals, will have served a good purpose. If it serves to make other papers more careful, it will accomplish very valuable results.

Not many days since a certain paper talked about the cowhide for papers which are not financially responsible. There are very few western newspaper conductors but would kill a man who attempted that mode of correction. Thus the paper in question advises a course which would result in the shedding of blood. The strange part of the matter is that the paper so advising the cowhide is a religious paper. Notwithstanding that the advice it gives is very unchristian. Very savage.

Because a man controls a newspaper he does not thereby become the custodian of the masses, the moulder of opinion and the conservator of the morals of the people. He may advise, counsel and persuade, but when people want heed, they are not to be lashed as the Tribune's method is, nor are they to be cowed as the Deseret News advises. Newspapers are to obey the law as other pursuits do, or they are to take the consequences, as the Tribune is likely to do.

The Argus severely reproves Mr. Varian for his presence in the case against the Tribune, as well as for language used in his argument. We do not know who is responsible on the Tribune, but we recall an incident of the late campaign which shows the reprehensible character of the paper clearly. On one occasion we answered one of its articles. The next day appeared a leading article, full of abuse of the editor of THE DISPATCH. The article admitted that it knew nothing of us, but was content to say if we were from the north we were a white-cap, if we hailed from the south, a ku klux. No one ever sheds a tear when such a paper comes to grief.

The Argus takes a great deal of interest in the Brown-Tribune case. The Argus man was he who wrote the libel and of course it is but natural for him to feel interest in the case. He, however, should not forget the dragging tactics of the paper. This thing of "blatting" people just to see them wince is a very reprehensible trait in newspapers, and means should be adopted to render the custom unpopular. An action for libel is the most effective means an individual has for rendering the custom unfashionable. In a contest between a paper and an individual the paper has every advantage. If it is just and liberal it will be very careful not to abuse its power.

While as a journalist we may say that the verdict in the Arthur Brown vs. Tribune case is a little severe, yet as an individual who has suffered some by the dragging methods of that paper, we can say, and do say it most emphatically, we are only sorry that we didn't recover the entire sum sued for, $25,000. The Tribune is overbearing, ruthless and utterly careless of the feelings of others. Three thousand and five hundred dollars is a good roundish sum to build up, nickle by nickle, and they will be a little careful how they incur another small mauling.

The changed conditions at Washington, since the adjournment of congress, will excite many long and free conferences among the members. It would be very interesting to hear the comments. The jibings will be keen and bitter, doubtless.

It is by no means settled as yet which party controls the constitutional convention. The result is very close and no one can now say which will get it. THE DISPATCH still hopes it is in the hands of the democrats, for good and all.

It is not likely that Mickle and Kofford will ever surrender. Should they do so, it is very doubtful if any jury would ever have a chance to hang them. The friends of poor Burns are too indignant for the slow processes of the law.

Water power is plentiful in the columns of the Ogden papers. They are doing a vast amount of wind-work, in the matter. It is time the real power was appearing.

The militia of Utah covered itself with glory in the recent sham battle at Salt Lake. We feel sure that the same result would have followed had the battle been real.

The A. P. A. has no better lease on life than had the know-nothings. It will live as long as the k. n. s. did, and no longer.

The saddest memory of the late disastrous campaign is by far the defeat of Hon. Wm. L. Wilson of West Virginia.

Positive and Negative. The Race Question is unsettled. But it is settled that Hood's Sarsaparilla leads all remedies. Disease marches through all lands. But good health blesses all who take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Dyspepsia is a great foe of the human race. But Hood's Sarsaparilla puts it to flight. Scrofula is one of the most terrible of diseases. But Hood's Sarsaparilla expels it from the system.

The people of this day, like Job, suffer from boils. But Hood's Sarsaparilla is a sovereign remedy for them. Catarrh is one of the most disagreeable disorders. But Hood's Sarsaparilla is sure to relieve and cure it.

Rheumatism racks the system like a thumb-screw. But it retreats before the power of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Loss of appetite leads to melancholia. But Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the plainest repast tickle the palate. Life is short and time is fleeting, but Hood's Sarsaparilla will bless humanity as the ages roll on.

A Queer Copper Mine. There are many kinds of mines and numerous inventions for saving production, says Professor L. E. Waring of Omaha. "But the strangest one I ever heard of is at Butte, Mon. When mines were first discovered in that locality, it was found that the water contained in the fissures was so strongly impregnated with copper as to be good for medicinal purposes. In a short time it was noticed that they had very appearance of being made of pure copper, so thickly were they covered with that metal. In noting this fact, one man resolved to try an experiment. He immediately purchased the exclusive right to the water. Then he put in a series of reservoirs and tanks along the little gulch where the water ran. These he filled with all the old metal to be had in the town, including old barrel hoops. At the end of six months he found that the old junk was totally destroyed, and in its place was a sedimentary deposit in the bottom of the reservoirs which was 80 per cent copper."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Deafness Cannot be Cured. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

ARMOUR'S POOR RELATIONS. The Big Packer Tells a Funny Story About One He Hasn't Made Rich.

It has been a matter of current report for years among board of trade men that Phil Armour has no poor relations, says a Chicago newspaper man. "He will not allow any of them to remain poor," a veteran of the board remarked by way of explanation of this unusual good fortune of a rich man. "He makes them all rich."

"I have heard that story before," Mr. Armour remarked, with a smile, when one of his friends asked him about it the other day. "But it's a mistake. I have enough of them."

Then the big packer burst out in a laugh, and his friends knew a good story was coming. "One of the poor kind—he lives down in Illinois—is one of the most persistent men I ever knew. He keeps writing and writing for money all the time. He is not a bad fellow, only imprudent, and if he displayed the same energy in attending to business that he does in writing to me he would have been rich a long time ago. Well, he kept sending me one letter after another, saying that if he only had $500 he would be all right. He repeated this so often that one day I told my secretary to send a letter saying that if he would bother me for a year I would send him $500."

"Well, sir," and Mr. Armour's sides shook with laughter, "as soon as the mails could bring a reply I got it. He said, 'Make it $1,000 and I'll be satisfied.' I thought it was such a good thing that I sent him the money."

"What happened next?" "In about three months he wrote again, saying the agreement was off because his wife had been included."

Mr. Armour seemed to think the whole thing was a great joke and especially enjoyed the shrewdness of his poor relation.
