Glass,—any old size; Snow & Young.

Springville Independent: A letter from Elder D. P. Felt states that the first issue of the Chautauoga paper of which he is to be editor will appear about Dec. 3 next. His many friends here will no doubt be favored with sample copies, the appearance of which will be awaited with interest.

The R. G. W. makes several changes in time effective November 5th. The most important being in the trains running to and from Sanpete. The Sanpete branch has been re-laid with heavy steel rails and the time of trains shortened up about 45 minutes between Thistle Junction and Mantle.*20-30.

For window glass, see Snow & Young.

We are pleased to learn that Wm. B. Ridd, father of W. J. Ridd, R. G. W. traveling passenger agent, who was seriously injured by a blast in his quarry near Salt Lake about three weeks ago, is rapidly recovering and will be able to leave the hospital in about a week. Mr. Ridd's many friends will rejoice at his recovery.

Odd sizes our hobby; Snow & Young.

B. F. Fleiner and J. K. Bishop returned Saturday evening from Death canyon where they have been engaged in doing the assessment work on the Blaine claim. They report an excellent showing in the property and bring back some fine looking ore samples in proof of their statements. The ore is a good grade galena and if found in sufficient quantities would make the property a paying proposition. They expect to resume work next spring.

Mary Jane Karl, a patient from the insane asylum, was in town this morning taking in the sights. She said Mrs. Knight had sent her down to Mrs. Pike after some mince meat, but was unable to find Dr. Pike's place. E. J. Ward saw her and believing she was a patient telephoned to the asylum and had them come and get her.

Proof of Labor.

Proof of labor on the Eureka lode in American Fork Mining district was filed with the county recorder today by Joseph J. Burnswood.

New Hotel Idea.

A detective was formerly paid a good salary by the keeper of a big hotel in Hot Springs, Ark., simply to lounge in the lobby and listen to the complaints and criticism of guests. There is always a feeling of friendliness and comradeship between guests at a hotel, and this detective made it his business to become acquainted with all the visitors. They thought he was a fellow guest. The detective would lead the conversation to the merits of the hotel, and if a man complained of the service or his accommodations the complaint was promptly reported to the landlord.

For instance, if a guest complained that he liked to sleep late in the morning and he could not do it because he had a room with an east exposure, so that the sun came in and awakened him, the detective would report to the landlord. In a little while the landlord would say to the guest:

"I was thinking this morning about you in that east room. Do you like to sleep late in the morning?"

The guest would say that he did.

"Well," the landlord would say, "I was thinking that you did, and in that case the sun must disturb you. I will give you a better room on the north side of the house."

That made the guest a friend of the house for life. A man never forgets a landlord who takes an interest in him.

This detective found out what particular dishes the guests enjoyed and all their hobbies and notions and likes and dislikes, and the landlord acted on this information. It paid so well that the house was full all the time and the landlord's salary was raised. His praises were sung so widely and his fame as a successful landlord spread so that a big hotel in Minneapolis hired him at an enormous salary. The detective who did this work was known to the attaches of the hotel as "the kick hunter."—Kansas City Star.

The Story of Ponce.

Ponce is an old story today. In its history is a fairy tale which has the merit of being true. In the years when time went slower a page lounged through the leisure of Ferdinand's court. He was young, impudent and abominably good looking. A princess smiled and beckoned. That was enough. There and then he was sent to another world, to a better one, to the tropics which Columbus had founded. He landed at Boriquen, assisted with easy gallantry in eliminating the natives, assisted also in gathering the gold which they left. Meanwhile Boriquen had been christened Puerto Rico. Incidentally the page had grown old. Whether he regretted the princess is problematic. That he missed his good looks is clear. In an effort to recover them he took a trip. The story of El Dorado has not yet been told. But another story, equally if not more seductive, was current then. It was to the effect that somewhere near by were the fountains of eternal youth. In search of those waters he sailed. The land which he reached was so rich in flowers that he called it Florida. But of the waters not a trace. And yet, may it be that the legend of them typified fame? For it was that which he did find. His name was Ponce de Leon, and it was he who founded Ponce.—Waverly Magazine.

He Was Convinced.

Mrs. Hayricks—it says here in the paper, Silas, that this war has served to bring the people of our country closer together. Do you think there's any truth in it?

Mr. Hayricks—Yes. When I looked into the parlor last night, Lieut. Striplings and our Annie were sitting a good deal closer together than I have ever seen 'em afore he went away.—Chicago News.

Denmark's Lenient King.

Some years ago a frank countler, who was protesting against a proposed act of leniency, told the king of Denmark that he was "not feared as a king should be." His majesty laughingly rejoined: "I can forgive you so long as you do not tell me I am not loved as a king should be." "That is a criticism no one would wish to make," replied the courtier. "Then I must live up to my reputation," said the king, as he signed the pardon which had been under discussion.—Tit-Bits.
