HARMONY AND COMPROMISE.

Harmony has been preached to us so long that it has become repugnant, and compromise so often that it has become a reproach. Each time, through moral cowardice, no doubt, we have submitted, and each time we have seen the inevitable fiasco. It cannot be otherwise. Man cannot serve two masters, and in attempting to do so bring shame upon himself, disaster to his cause, and disgrace to those he would benefit. If the American people could but experience a few years of tyranny now and again, it would do them incalculable good. We have enjoyed so much prosperity, so much good government, so much freedom of action, so many political liberties, that we have ceased to appreciate our blessings. We have taken things as a matter of course so long, that no longer do we guard our rights and privileges. Under a beneficent government we have become so engrossed in the pursuit of material advantages that we are fast becoming a race of political mollycoddlers. It cannot be denied that the business men do not take that interest in the political affairs of their country, which as patriots they should. Like us, the fear of offending their patrons make cowards of them all. Mammon is the biggest coward that ever lived, and we all worship at his shrine. The result is compromise with conscience; the obliteration of convictions; indifference to results; treachery to country; and subjugation of individuality. This must be changed or the government founded upon liberty, equality and justice to all; administered by the people, cannot live. A much more serious condition confronts the United States today than did 45 years ago. And it is in the people themselves. They must do their duty by their country by studying and participating themselves. They must become patriots in the true sense. They must do this before some great calamity impels them to action. They must look to the right rather than to the easy path. They must have the conviction and the courage to put into force that conviction. They must do away with compromise and all its kindred evil. They must become men. Harmony and compromise were never the inspiration of the heroes of this world. Everyone should avoid them as he would the devil. They are the twin evils of America. And so subtle are they, that they have possession ere we know it. We are slaves, bound hand and foot and do not know it, until we attempt to assert ourselves. Then we find that harmony and compromise have so drugged our conscience that we are powerless to act.

POCATELLO REFORM.

Prosecuting Attorney George E. Gray of Bannock county has determined to rid Pocatello of its prostitutes. As a public officer it is Mr. Gray's duty to prosecute criminals wherever found. We congratulate him on the stand that he has taken. Prostitution is a crime and should be punished. But let us deal out justice equally. It is quite frequent that an inmate of a house of ill-fame is fined, imprisoned or forced to leave town on account of conducting a disorderly house or plying her trade too flagrantly. Why does not some public prosecutor prosecute the visitors to her place? We think that if the respectable men who patronize these houses were handled with the same vigor as the inmates that there would be little need of crusades against public houses of this character. One or two prosecutions of this kind would soon rid any city of public houses. The two participants in the crime are equally guilty. Neither is entitled to leniency. If the great theory of moral reformers is to banish public houses, let them go at it in this way. It seems that these reformers do not care for the crime, but hate the publicity. As a matter of public policy, The Tribune is convinced that the public house is better than the private deadfall. The Tribune is convinced that it is better to have such persons segregated from the public generally, rather than scattered throughout the city. We cannot see any particular difference morally between the old hat and the "dainty tid-bit." We cannot see any particular virtue in the advertisement of one over the other. The one flings out her red light and those who run may read. The other advertisement is a little less public but just as forceful. It is subtle and insidious, but equally strong. There is no difference worth mentioning. The people should watch Pocatello carefully, and if good is accomplished, all cities should follow suit. We hope that Attorney Gray may clear up Pocatello. It has long needed an overhauling.

BOOM LITERATURE.

Most western towns indulge too much in boom literature. In their efforts to secure new comers, every sort of claim and promise is held out. We read, not long since, in an article on the Boise Valley, that the average crop of alfalfa in this section was 8 or 10 tons to the acre; that the average yield of sugar beets was 19 tons; that wheat averaged 40 bushels to the acre; and that all other things were in the same proportion. The claim was put forth that the weak and down trodden, the lame and the halt, could find their golden opportunity in Canyon County. A special plea was made to the distressed to leave the stricken east and come to Idaho. Idaho offers untold opportunities to men with capital, energy, industry and frugality. A man possessing any of these qualities will receive a large return on his investment, whether he invests brains and energy or capital. That is all the State should claim. It must be remembered that Idaho is a new country, her resources are not developed. It will take capital and labor, brains and energy, determination and fore sight to develop the State. It is men of that character that we want. The shiftless and the impotent have no more business in Idaho than they have in Chicago. It is almost criminal to hold out the promise of large returns for little efforts. The siren song of the boomer has lured many a poor family to disaster. It is true that organizations whose purpose is to attract investigators and develop the resources should tell the simple truth. Idaho's resources, when truthfully described are eloquent enough. They will attract the right kind of people. No effort should be made to attract the other. We do not need and cannot use the weak. This is a country where giant undertakings are on foot and it takes giants to carry them through. To be sure the rewards are those of giants. The moral pigmy, the mental hillputian, the physical dwarf, have no business in Idaho. The success of Idaho towns has been brought about because the difficulties have been great enough to attract the strong, able, fearless, determined men of all sections. They have come, and finding work worthy of their metal, have given it their best efforts. This is the case throughout the state. As a result we have a high class of people. We have men who are the peers of any. Our business men could do business anywhere; our industrial leaders would be leaders in any clime; our professional men would stand high in any land. Our citizenship is of the best. Let us cut out a little of the boom, and get down to solid, substantial facts. Boom literature like any stimulant always produces its reaction.

yon County Fair held a meeting Monday night at which time the option on the Blatchley 40 acres was taken up and the secretary was authorized to advertise for bids for the sale of the old grounds. Sealed bids were to be received up to Friday night of this week. Owing to The Tribune going to press before the meeting it is impossible to say who will be the purchaser, but the prediction is made that the grounds will bring near $20,000. There are over 200 lots and all are in a desirable location.

The work of surveying for the speed track has been done and work will commence immediately putting the grounds in order for the coming fair, which from present indications will exceed all previous fairs.

Starkey Hot Springs.

Dan Brown, whom everyone knows in this town, and has, ever since the first stake was drove, and his reputation for truth and veracity will stand a 95 per cent test, took a ten days' lay off and went to the celebrated Starkey Hot Springs, returning home Sunday evening. Dan is not much on fish stories, for his early education in that line was somewhat neglected, but he always has the goods. He brought home 250 trout, many of them weighing one and a half pounds. He is loud in his praise of the Starkey resort. Dr. Starkey has all the conveniences and many of the luxuries that are dear to the hunter and fisherman at his resort. Mr. Brown said that if he had had C. R. Steunenberg or some other expert, that he would have had to bring his fish home by freight. It was on the strength of his statements that Ralph Sebree and W. E. Mosby left Monday morning for the Starkey Hot Springs.

Where we Stand ON THE Quality Question

MUCH is heard nowadays about clothes quality, and we have contributed our share toward the discussion and perhaps a little more.

There are so many reputable lines of clothing nowadays that there is no excuse for any man getting the worst of it, providing he uses common sense, and does not try to get something for nothing.

Yet a man isn't to be blamed for having flat-iron-faked clothes foisted on him;—at least for the first time. If it happens the SECOND time, it's his own fault;—because we have told how such a large percentage of clothes are given "selling shape" with the flat-iron, instead of careful needle-work—because the latter is cheaper.

If you want assurance that your clothes are going to give you constant gratification, and hold their shape and retain their original style;—then we invite you to try our
