The Fable of Four Men. "I got off a street car this morning," said a doctor to me, "and being in no hurry, I began moralizing on the actions and probable character of the three men who had alighted just ahead of me. The first one was even then half way down the block and was going on with such rapid strides that he had already put a couple of hundred yards between himself and the next man. "There," thought I, "goes a hustler!—a man who's bound to succeed in life." The second man was walking rather slower, and impressed me as one who would do fairly well, perhaps, in this world. But the last fellow was just dawdling along in the most shiftless sort of way. I very quickly set him down as a loafer.

"Just then another idea came home to me: All three were ahead of me!" —New York Tribune.
