Newspapers have their trials just like other people. The Spokesman Review had a taste of tribulation the first of the week when it suspended publication for a day or two owing to the strike among its employees. We missed its familiar face in our office and are glad that the difficulties were of short duration. It resumed publication Wednesday though the difficulty is not yet settled. There was a compromise made until the owner of the paper should return from the East when the matter will be taken up and it is hoped settled satisfactory to all concerned.
