Every county of the state will be organized. Each precinct in the county is asked to elect one or more delegates, who will meet in Moscow Sept. 1st, where a complete organization will be perfected.

The National Liquor Dealers Association are sending tons of wet literature in Idaho to defeat the Amendment. The dry forces must get busy.

Frank H. Winter, working under the direction of the Idaho Anti-Saloon League, is speaking over the state, and working to organize the counties for the Amendment. The people are asleep, and many do not know about the Amendment submitted. Mr. Winter wants Kendrick to send delegates to the above named convention.

From Boise, Our Capitol City

No Town More Charmingly Beautiful In That Quiet, Settled Fashion That Spells Home

There are towns in Idaho, especially in the north, with a wilder, more romantic appeal than Boise, but none more charmingly beautiful in that quiet, settled fashion that spells home. The arts of the real estate booster and the restlessness of tourist travel do not mar the staid loveliness of this town, which has its own business and goes about it, and its own considerable and unswerving population of 25,000 souls.

Boise is a city of homes, long, level streets, where walnut and maple trees nearly meet overhead, extend for miles, and everywhere are homes — no weary stretches of vacant lots, but everywhere green lawns and shaded porches where people sit and enjoy life in a privacy wrought by the trees, that reminds one of life in the old Spanish patios.

But Boise is more than a city of homes. It is the center of the life of the state. Situated in southern Idaho, and connected with the north by a railroad service which rambles through two other states by the way, and by a wagon road over the mountains that daunts any driver unless of an ox-team, it is yet closely related to the north as its capitol city. Here are situated the State House with its legislative chambers, Penitentiary, Roman Catholic and Episcopal Cathedrals, Soldiers' Home and state charitable institutions, not to mention such definite contacts with the national government as the U. S. Assay Office and Army Barracks. Boise seems, on reflection, to be a city of institutions, where the beautiful Capitol dome, rising high above the trees, dominates the pulsing life going on beneath. One picture in fancy a city of crowded streets where hurrying legislators with black books and top hats, soldiers in khaki, an occasional chain-gang in stripes and priests in shovel hats, mingle with thronging citizens on business intent, and make varied and picturesque the ordinary life of the city. Such, however, is not the case. Our soldiers have gone to the border, and the barracks — old stone and wood buildings covered with vines, and handsome modern brick structures alike — stand silent and empty around the deserted, grass-grown parade grounds; no chain-gang is apparent; no legislative session has occurred for more than a year, and during sessions top hats are rare. A vacation humor, moreover, seems to possess the town; slirtwaisted men talk politics over counters or office desks, women crochet on shady piazzas, pretty girls in dainty dresses and small boys in home-made automobiles go up and down the pleasant streets, and these make up the summer life of Boise as seen by the casual observer.

Boise is an old town, but it does not look old. One Hays street is a picturesque little log structure, with beautiful kept grounds, around it, cherished and preserved by the local chapter of D. A. R.'s as the first house in Boise to shelter a woman. This is old, as, indeed are the houses in many streets, but almost everything is tended and kept in repair by a prosperous community. Boise is of the present and the future, not of the past.

One criticism is made especially in the summer, by visitors from other progressive towns, and that is with reference to the park system. An answer may be made that walking down any street of Boise, with its spreading trees and well kept lawns, is like walking in a park. The fact remains, however, that there is no beautiful, extensive, well-kept out-of-door gathering place for the people of Boise. One down-town square, with seats, band-stand, drinking fountain and small play ground is inadequate for that kind of thing. The Natatorium Park is small and crowded with concessions and picnic tables, to the detriment of what natural beauty it might have. The Julia Davis Park is a small but beautiful improvement along the river, with green lawn, young trees, honey-suckles and roses growing along the stone embankment, but here the lack of shade and seats, and the fumes from the gas tanks, which a westerly breeze brings, are drawbacks. The Pierce Park is a beautiful grove but too far from the city. Here, however, the hand of man has interfered wisely in placing such necessities and adornments only as ducks and swans on the pond, boats on the tiny lake, a picturesque swing foot-bridge over the river, not too many tables, seats, swings and an inconspicuous enough dance pavilion. By turning one's back on these, it is possible to feast the eyes on lovely groves of slender-stemmed trees, with brown hills and blue mountains in the distance and no reminder of the works of man to interfere with one's communion with nature.

Boise, in short, is such a beautiful gem that it is hard to understand how its people can remain content until every line and facet is polished and made perfect. —Boise Correspondent.

National pay-up week will occur October 2 to 7. This will be a time when everyone is expected to make a special effort to get square with the world.

Mrs. H. P. Hull entertained Mrs. Alexander Hunter, Mrs. Lou Hunter and Mrs. Anna Lang-Elliott of Quebec, at dinner Wednesday evening.

Mrs. H. P. Hull gave a lawn party at her home last week in honor of her niece, Miss Louise Leslie. Twelve guests were present.

Attention is called to an article in another column descriptive of our capital city. A considerable degree of ignorance prevails among untraveled northerners regarding the south—largely on account of the inadequate means of communication between the northern and southern sections. Under the circumstances, such accounts as the Gazette is printing seem desirable.

Perry Black and family of Big Bear ridge expect to start on an automobile tour soon. They will go as far as Nebraska this summer where they plan to spend the winter and from there to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. They intend to camp along the way and will probably not return for two years.

The regular weekly band practice will take place Monday evening. All of the band boys are urged to be present.

There will be a wrestling match between Orphie Hupp of Little Bear ridge and Carl Carlson of Troy. The match will take place at the Barnum Theatre Saturday evening, August 12. Carlson recently threw Hartinger of Leland and much interest is being shown in the outcome of the coming match.

Miss Clarice Abrahamson returned to her home near Moscow Monday.

Good Yields Reported

Lapwai, Aug. 7.—Threshing was commenced a few days ago on the John Maynard place on the middle fork of the Tom Beall creek and the report received today from 75 acres of barley averaged 60 bushels, while the wheat average is 40 bushels to the acre.

The weather for the past few weeks has been especially favorable for maturing the grain, the heads being well filled and the kernels plump and heavy. Spring grain seeded on summer fallow land used last year for growing corn or beans will return about the same yield as the fall sown crops.

KENDRICK FAIR DATES FIXED

September 27-8-9 Chosen by Fair Committee

The fair committee met Wednesday and definitely fixed the dates for the Kendrick fair. The dates selected are the 27th 28th and 29th of September—Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of the last week in September. The Moscow fair will be held the week before and the Lewiston fair the week following the Kendrick fair.

The committee has decided to erect a pavilion 150 feet long and 50 feet wide between the Kendrick Store and the Kendrick Hotel. The street will be closed and a fence twelve feet high built around the inclosure and a canvas roof put over at least half the space inclosed by the fence. The space from the alley, back of the Kendrick store, to the Kendrick Hardware warehouse will be reserved for the livestock. Substantial sheds will be erected and stalls provided for the livestock exhibits.

The space for the agricultural, horticultural, fine arts and other exhibits will be 50 feet wide and 75 feet long which ought to give ample room for everything. The entire pavilion will be lighted by electricity.

A representative from each ridge and three from Potlatch ridge were selected as members of the exhibits committee and their loyalty to the Potlatch and to Kendrick will be shown this fall when the exhibits are brought in for the fair. Each member of the committee is urged to consult with Joday Long, chairman of the committee, at the earliest possible time in order to get the farmers on the different ridges interested in saving their grain, grasses, fruits etc. Liberal prizes will be offered and a special prize given for the best general display of Agricultural products raised in the Potlatch. Following are the names of the committee: N. E. Ware, Bear Ridge; Mrs. M. A. Deaobold, American Ridge; Harry Hupp, Little Bear Ridge; Columbus Clark, Fix Ridge; L. K. Dahlgren, Texas Ridge; N. E. Newhall and Fred Darby, Cedar Creek; M. Blackburn, H. A. Russel and Dan Dawes, Potlatch and Charles Chandler, Juliaetta.

The business men of Kendrick are going to do their best this fall to make the fair something that every resident of the Potlatch may be proud of. To do this the hearty co-operation of the farmers will be absolutely necessary. If you will have any agricultural products whatever that you think a little better than common, bring them in and show yourself to be a good booster for the Potlatch.

Edna Wicks of Gifford is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Guy Lewis.

CANDIDATES FILE FOR STATE OFFICES

The 1916 political campaign in Idaho has begun in earnest. Complete tickets for state offices were filed with the secretary of state by republicans and democrats with one exception, the democrats having failed to name a candidate for state superintendent. ## Filings Are Illegal

Lewiston, Idaho, Aug. 8. — An opinion was received by wire yesterday from Assistant Attorney General Herbert Wing, stating that all nominations filed by petition here last Saturday are illegal and cannot be placed on the primary ballot. This ruling annuls the filings of all progressive candidates with the exception of Frank H. Wood for assessor and Frank Knapp, candidate for commissioner, second district. The nominations of Mr. Wood and Mr. Knapp were filed in the regular way with the payment of filing charges, while in all the other filings no fee was paid.

The names of candidates can be written on the ballot at the primary election by their supporters, or afterwards placed in nomination by electors or the county central committee.
