"The Girl Philippa"

When Robert W. Chambers wrote "The Girl Philippa" he set its time as August and September of 1914, when the nations of Europe were entering upon their terrible war, and the place as both the United States and France. A brief prologue is enacted some 16 years before that in one of the tumultuous Balkan States.

Full opportunity has been taken of these momentous times and places in Vitagraph's motion picture presentation of Mr. Chamber's novel. It was produced, with charming Anita Stewart in the title role, under the supervision of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company.

Here are a few of the many thrilling moments that Mr. Smith has supplied in this picture.

A squad of mutinous soldier storms the castle of their Balkan king. The king makes a futile struggle for his life and the queen, sacrificing herself to save her daughter—who later on is the girl Philippa—also falls in the debacle.

Two hussars fight a duel in the dark for possession of the little crown princess, who is kidnapped by the victor.

A foreign spy enters the ordinance department offices in Washington, robs a safe of its most valuable secrets.

Two English spies, after a most bitter fight, overpower and bind two alien spies in a hotel room in Paris.

One of the English spies, riding in a moving railway carriage, is fired upon from a pursuing motor car, the bullets shattering the car door and windows.

The same automobile a little later encounters an enemy motor cycle armed with a machine gun, and a terrible battle ensues.

The cabaret of a peaceful French village is suddenly thrown into turmoil by an open fight between two bands of secret agents.

Hero and Heroine escape from the upper story of a besieged inn, attacked by machine guns, magazine pistols and a battering ram, by the use of a scanty and hastily improvised cord.

Street barricades are destroyed by artillery fire and the use of hand grenades and liquid fire.

A horseman, at full charge, jumps his animal over a street barricade and captures the enemy's flag.

The grim execution of a traitor.

The biggest love scenes that have been staged for a long time.

And these are only a few of the many thrills in "The Girl Philippa," a picture which has broken more box office records than any photoplay production to date, this picture will be shown

Caribou of Alaska.

The chief food of the caribou of Alaska is reindeer moss, of a greenish white color, which is scattered over the hills and mountains of Alaska. Their favorite feeding grounds are on the treeless and semitreeless parts of the territory, including the tundras along the coast of the Arctic ocean, and down to the Pacific side of the Alaska peninsula. They scatter widely in summer and collect in herds in the fall. Each herd has its leader, and it is said that if the leader is killed the rest of the herd becomes panic stricken and stampedes back and forth until another animal takes the lead.

Washing Machines and Clothes

Clothes are things found on bodies, store shelves, clothes lines, married men's bills, and occasionally on actresses and dancers.

Critical glances, connubial debates, high prices, tell-tale hairs, worn spots and dirt are some of the things found on clothes.

Clothes are designed to cover a body. Sometimes they also cover a body with debts.

Shakespeare said that the apparel oft proclaimed the man. It is evident that there were some loud dressers even in Shakespeare's day.

Besides trying to cover, clothes generally make an attempt at ornamentation.

The most ornamental clothes are those which have never been worn.

In our very best families, clothes are removed when dirty, so that the dirt may be removed therefrom.

The easiest way to remove clothes is not for us to tell.

However, the easiest way to remove dirt from clothes, is by means of the Marshalls Vacuum Washing Machine.
