THEN AND NOW

Lewiston is making a substantial growth as a center for the mining interests in the interior country. A year ago very few mining stocks in the camps of Buffalo Hump, Dixie, Elk City or any interior mining center was owned in Lewiston or could be marketed here.

Now it is different. Many thousands of shares are owned by Lewiston people and any mining prospector of merit can be sure of finding a market here for its stock, and at the rate the mining interest is being developed here Lewiston can soon support a mining exchange.

The result is probably due to the creation and maintenance of the Central Idaho Mining bureau. Mines of any merit soon become known and investors can get reliable information concerning any property in the several districts that have come to look to Lewiston as a mining center.

Men who have properties in the Hump, Thunder Mountain, Elk, Pierce, Dixie or any interior camp do not know rush to cities outside of the state to get the capital for their development work. As a result Lewiston has become within the year a considerable mining center and has profited greatly from the successful development of the mines.

Spokane often boasts that her marvelous growth has been due in great measure to successful mining investments made by her citizens. Spokane capital exploited all the mining camps and districts, north, south, east and west and wealth flowed to enrich her citizens.

Lewiston has an equal opportunity to supply capital for the mines of the interior camps now rapidly coming into prominence and can make this city the center of the mining activity of Central Idaho.

REPEAL THE PORTAGE BILL

The Oregon legislature will meet Monday, December 21, primarily to cure some fatal defects in the assessment laws, but there is some anticipation that the legislators will want to dip into other legislation as well and among the measures that may come up for action is the repeal of the portage road bill.

The Oregon legislature of 1903, passed a bill appropriating $165,000 for the purpose of constructing a portage railway around the Cello rapids of Columbia river; since that time the government has decided on a plan for building the Dalles-Cello canal and will begin work as soon as the right-of-way is secured.

The author of the bill has announced his belief that the law directing the construction of the portage should now be repealed but that the money appropriated or as much as necessary should be made available for securing the right-of-way for the government canal. This would give quick action on removing the only obstruction now in the way of actual work on the canal. Full credit should be given the Oregon legislature if it hastens the construction work.
