Andrew Jackson's Love for His Wife.

Jackson's wife died suddenly just after he had been elected president. It was a great blow to him, and he was never the same again, though his strength of will and his desperate courage fought with this indefinite pain. For the rest of his life he lived as she would have had him live, guided his actions by the thought of what his wife living would have him do—loving her still, with the love that passeth all understanding.

As the years went by, this love became almost sacred. Every night before he retired he read her prayer book, with her miniature, which he always wore in his breast, placed beside it. He was a lover still at seventy-eight, for just before he died he said, with lingering tenderness, "Heaven will be no heaven to me if I do not meet my wife there."

He declined the sarcophagus fit for an emperor, that he might be buried as a simple citizen, in the garden by her side. His last words were of her, his last look rested upon her portrait, that hung opposite his bed, and if there be dreaming in the dark, the vision of her brought him peace at last.—May Woman's Home Companion.

Rights of Home Seeker In the Ancient City

First in Importance Said Senator Heyburn.

A Wallace special dated May 2nd says: United States Senator Heyburn, who has recently returned from the east and who leaves for San Francisco tomorrow to look after two important mining suits, said yesterday in regard to Idaho's interests at the national capital.

"One of the most important questions taken up was the adjustment of the forest reserve of the state, to the end that the boundaries might be established by the conditions existing on the ground and not fixed by map, when those looking after these matters have no knowledge of the exact conditions. The boundaries should conform with the natural watersheds from which water flows to the irrigated regions of our state, and to the end that no land in Idaho may be tied up or withdrawn from settlement.

"I am working for the extension of the survey of government lands so that as much as possible can be made available for settlement. I regard the rights of the home maker as first importance, rather than those of the people who come into the state to enjoy the resources, and then carry the products with them beyond the state. I do not regard this as the development of the state of that which should go to the home maker and the resident. My efforts will be directed to securing such development of the state resources that they will leave within the state the largest possible portion of the profits obtained from such development, whether it be of our mines, timber, or other resources."

In touching the proposed repeal of the timber and stone act Senator Heyburn said he was strongly opposed to such action. "I believe in a rigid enforcement of the law so as to prevent the acquirement of large tracts of the timber land through 'straw' entries, he said. "The greatest prosperity of our timber lands can only be derived from the individual ownership within the limits of the law and the establishment of sawmills in such sections that the individual can sell his timber to the mills or have it cut by custom contract. This system would destroy what in effect amounts to timber trusts and that enables the control of the market, either for the purchase or the sale of our timber lands."—Pocatello Tribune.

Augusta Holmes.

In the June Delineator there is an interesting sketch of the life and work of Augusta Holmes, the noted French composer who died recently. Percy Mitchell, an intimate friend of the composer, contributes the article. Mrs. Holmes granted the interview and sat for the photographs that accompany the article, only a few days before her death, of which there was no premonition; so the paper is in a way one of her last testaments. A poet of great power; the possessor of a fine voice, an excellent pianist, and, without doubt, the greatest woman composer of her time, she was, indeed, a remarkable woman. During her active life, her salon was the center of the music and art circles of Paris, and almost up to the day of her death she was engaged in enriching the world of music with her contributions.

The Wastes of the Body.

Every seven days the blood, muscles and bones of a man of average size loses two pounds of worn out tissue. This waste cannot be replenished and the health and strength kept up without perfect digestion. When the stomach and digestive organs fail to perform their functions, the strength lets down, health gives way, and disease sets up. Kodal Dyspepsia Cure enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all the wholesome food that may be eaten into the kind of blood that rebuilds the tissues and protects the health and strength of the mind and body. Kodol cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. It is an ideal spring tonic. Sold by Watson & Moore.

Serious Cutting Affray.

In a drunken saloon row at Driggs last Sunday a man by the name of Williams was seriously stabbed in the left side by Lorenzo Jeffs. After sobering up Jeffs gave himself up to the authorities. Williams is in a very critical condition and grave doubts are entertained as to his recovery.

The President at Old Santa Fe Yesterday.

President Roosevelt spent three hours and twenty minutes yesterday in Santa Fe, N. M., whose buildings and monuments seemed to be of interest to him. At the capitol he made an address to 10,000 people. The president said it was a great pleasure to him to come to New Mexico, from which territory more than half the members of his regiment came. A stop was made at San Miguel church: the oldest church edifice in the United States, and at the cathedral where Vicar General Anthony Fourche, baptised the son of Geo. W. Amije, a sergeant in the rough riders, President Roosevelt being the godfather. The child was named Theodore Roosevelt.

TOO MANY LOBSTERS

BANGOR MAN ASTONISHES VISITOR FROM MINNEAPOLIS.

Native Made Him Believe the Crustaceans Were So Plentiful They Invaded Lawns and Porches—Furnished Proof in Plenty.

A man from Minneapolis who had been spending a few days at one of the Maine coast resorts came to Bangor this week and in conversation with a friend in a hotel cafe here remarked that he had enjoyed his visit to the shore, but that he had not found lobsters as plentiful there as he had expected.

"Lobsters? Why, that's queer," responded the Bangor man. "Why, the woods are full of them, so to speak. Come down to my place at Hancock Point and I'll give you your fill of them."

"Many down there?" queried the Westerner.

"Many?" The Bangor man regarded his questioner with surprise, replying: "Why, man, lobsters are so thick down there that they've got to be a nuisance. Have to go out mornings and sweep them off the paths—even climb up on the porch. Beastly nuisance when you don't care for them, you know."

The man from the West looked dazed, but promised to accompany the Bangorean to Hancock Point next day, there to help repel the invasion of lobsters. The Bangor man went to the telegraph office and sent this message to his wife at Hancock Point: "Buy all the lobsters within ten miles, and scatter them about the lawn, paths and porches."

Next day, when the joker and his guest arrived at the cottage, the whole place had been planted with green and squirming crustaceans, and the fun began the minute they entered the walk. The Bangor man kicked something out of his path.

"What's that?" asked the guest.

"Oh, that's one of those confounded lobsters," was the calm reply. A little further on more lobsters wriggled over the walk, and the cottager declared, in disgusted tones, that it was pretty tough when a man couldn't get into his own house without climbing over a lot of slimy lobsters. The Westerner's eyes started from their sockets, but when he got to the vine-covered porch entrance he nearly fainted.

Two enormous lobsters were clinging by their claws to the trellis, and, grabbing one of them, the host remarked:

"They'll be in my bedroom next—here, this one will make a good broil for you!"

The big lobster was broiled, and the man from Minneapolis ate it with keen delight. Next day he ate others and when he got back to Bangor he declared solemnly:

"I never would have believed it had I not seen them with my own eyes."

—Bangor (Maine) Correspondence.

Leigh.

Leigh, Fremont Co., Ida., April 29.—The weather continues cold and stormy. The valley is white with snow that fell yesterday, but it is fast disappearing. Very little seeding has been done yet. There is a good depth of snow in the mountains, and the Snake river will be very high this season.

Hay has been very plentiful with us this season; about 15,000 head of sheep were wintered in the valley. The range between this and the lower valley is as bare as a floor, and if the weather doesn't warm up a little there will be great loss of sheep.

An effort was made to unite the two school districts and build a schoolhouse on the townsite and have a graded school, but it didn't work.

Sister Lydia Jarman, who has been ill some time, is still bedfast, but is improving.—Deseret News.

THE ANCIENT COPTIC FAITH.

Egypt Now the Center of This Form of Worship.

In Westminster abbey, after the coronation of King Edward, a silver votive cross was left by the Abyssinian envoy, Ras Makonnen. It represents the faith of the Coptic church, the most debased in Christendom. Egypt is the center of this faith, the patriarch of Alexandria, as he is called, living at Cairo. Not even the priests understand the language of the services, essentially the same as that used by the Pharaohs, with a mixture of the tongue of Homer. In its ritual is found an admixture of ancient Egyptian and Jewish ceremonial together with that of primitive Christianity. Here ordination is conferred not by the laying on of hands, but by breathing and the universal kiss is interchanged among the congregation. Children may act as deacons and may receive the sacrament—bread dipped in wine. In Abyssinia the Jewish and Egyptian ritual is carried still further to excess. The ark is the center of worship, which includes dancing. The Jewish Sabbath is observed. Distinction is drawn between clean and unclean animals. Polygamy also has lingered on. So extreme is their belief in certain things that they observe the greatest festival of the year amounts to an annual captivation of the whole nation. They have even canonized Pilate because he washed his hands and said: "I am innocent of the blood of this just man."

Henry Wright, Secy.,
St. Anthony, Idaho.

First date of Pub. May 7.

Pump Irrigation.

In our western country and even in some localities in the central west, considerable irrigation has been done by the means of pumps. Some declare that irrigation by means of pumps can never amount to much. But we know that this practice is as old as civilization, and this mode of irrigation has been employed in some parts of the world successfully for centuries. There are many places in our western states, where from five to fifteen acres of land are irrigated by pumps driven by wind-mills. Doubtless the future will see the further utilization of the pump, whether driven by wind or by other force.

Fat-Tailed Sheep in Siberia.

Vast tracts of natural pasture in Siberia are considered ideal for sheep raising, says the Live Stock Journal. The fat-tailed Tartar sheep is the best. At present these sheep are reared for the fat on their tails. The fat grows all through the summer and a yearling will give 20 pounds of tallow. In the winter months the fat gradually disappears; it is one of the provisions of nature. When no more food is to be had because of the snow the sheep derive sustenance by absorbing the fat. If housed and fed in the winter, the fat remains. This fat-tailed sheep is not a great wool producer, and an inferior breed is kept for that purpose.

Dormant Bacteria.

Prof. John L. Sheldon says: "Like some weeds, bacteria may remain dormant for long periods. When the conditions necessary for their growth return they immediately become active. Seeds of the cockle-burr, ragweed and sunflower may lie in the ground for a year or more without germinating, but when the soil is stirred up and they begin to feel the influence of the sunshine and air, the seedlings burst from their seed coats and push their way up through the soil, apparently all the more vigorous on account of their long rest."

New Zealand Bacon Shipments.

For some years the New Zealanders have been trying to ship bacon to England and get it there in good condition. Until recently they have met with little success so far as getting their product to market in good shape was concerned. The bacon generally came onto the market either tainted or discolored, due to the methods of freezing. Now a method of chilling and freezing has been invented that is said to make it possible to put the bacon onto the English market in as fine condition as when it came from the New Zealand factories.

The food and drink of hogs should be perfectly pure, if a pure product is desired.

City Council Meeting.

The city council held their regular monthly meeting in the council rooms last Monday evening. There was not much of importance to attend to. Dr. Middleton was appointed city physician; Wm Broadhurst, street commissioner; and Jos. Kershaw was licensed village scavenger.
