Garfield's Chums.

CHICAGO, June 9.—The Times' Washington special says: An interesting bit of history connected with the closing days of the Garfield administration was given the Times correspondent to-day. It appears that there was a good deal of trouble at the White House during the days of Garfield's illness. The chums, who were always so near to him, monopolized everything in the way of public business, and practically crowded out of Cabinet consideration everything in relation to the President and his family. It comes from high authority that Rockwell, one of the chums, a week or so before the President was removed to Elberon, wrote out a commission for himself as Quartermaster-General in the army and sought to get to the President for his signature. He showed it to Mrs. Garfield and asked her advice about it, and said that James had intended to appoint him, and to make certain of it, it would probably be better to have the President's hand to it while he was able. At this time Garfield was unconscious, and he remained so the greater part of the day, and only occasionally appears to have been conscious as to what was going on around him. Mrs. Garfield showed the commission to Mr. Blaine as head of the Cabinet, and asked his advice. Mr. Blaine was very indignant. He tore up the commission and added that it was the height of indecency for Rockwell to bring up any such proposition at such a time. He said there were many more important matters which needed consideration if the President should at any time be in a state of mind to think of them. The chums bitterly hated Blaine, and in every way they could exerted themselves in directing affairs as against any suggestions from him. Had the President lived, Blaine has since said in private with a number of gentlemen that he (Blaine) would have insisted upon the dismissal of all the chums or would have resigned his place in the Cabinet. At Long Branch the chums could not realize that Garfield was going to die. They had been with him and nursed him from day to day and firmly believed that when he recovered they would have the control and direction of affairs. It was part of their plans to oust Blaine at the very first opportunity. Some of their talk was one day carried to Blaine, and he was asked if he intended to take any notice of what the chums said—openly threatening what they were going to do. He replied: "Bah! I will have no fight with pissmires." Swain and Rockwell, during the short period of Garfield's short administration established a firm for the dispensation of patronage. All the army appointments, promotions and what not were largely controlled through them. Swain's great hold on General Garfield was through his financial relations with him. Swain had acquired quite a fortune during the last few years by carefully saving his salary, judicious investments and loans. He held a mortgage on Garfield's house in this city and also upon the farm in Mentor. Had Garfield lived and had these chums been allowed to retain their hold, his administration would certainly have become more notorious than Grant's in its worst days, when the White House was controlled by the small ring of place-men, who used the power of the government for the worst of purposes. Daggett, Weigher in the New York Custom House, belonged to this chum gang. He was the New York agent for dispensing patronage in that State in the interest of the chums. He followed the condition of the President very closely, and through his connection with the chums supplied Wall street with bulletins of the condition of the sick man. The chums, however, who had access to the sick room and who controlled all channels of approach to the President gave out more misinformation upon the subject than any one else connected with the case. Those who followed the information given by them lost heavily. One of the most significant incidents occurring during the President's illness illustrating the power of the chums occurred upon the day that the President was removed from Elberon. The Pennsylvania Railroad furnished a special train of two cars. One car was for the sick President and his associates and the other car was originally intended for the President's Cabinet. Colonel Rockwell, one of the chums, ordered otherwise. He took charge of the train and issued an order that no one be admitted without permission from him. Two Cabinet officers went down to that train and attempted to go into the empty car that was in front of the one assigned to the President. They were stopped by a brakeman, who said that no one could be admitted without a card from Colonel Rockwell, and so the Cabinet was obliged to follow in another car upon the regular train that left at 10:30 o'clock.

The man who furnishes the above addition to the history of that time gives an interesting fact about General Garfield's condition when he died. Garfield was thought to be quite a poor man, and his resources were supposed to be not much outside of his Congressional salary up to the time he was elected President, yet his individual estate, aside from his earnings as President, was said to reach something in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Some of the James Gang.

St. Louis, June 9.—The pursuit of the bank robbers has been continued vigorously to-day, and last accounts are that the gang is surrounded at a point a few miles northeast of Macon by 500 men from Linn, Sullivan, Macon and Adair counties, and that while they have kept their pursuers at bay so far by their heavier arms, their capture is considered certain. Two of the pursuing party were slightly wounded, and one of the robbers is known to have been badly hurt. The robbers are known to be men who have been stopping on Harper's farm, near Kirksville, for some days prior to the robbery. A train with a band of men is soon to leave for the place where the robbers are surrounded, and it is believed the latter have no possible chance for escape. If they attempt to break through the line they will be shot down without mercy. The whole country is up in arms, and men have left their fields, stores and workshops in all of half a dozen counties to hunt the desperadoes down. The exact amount lost by the bank is $4,792. A reward of $500 is offered for the capture of the robbers.

LATER.—The Post-Dispatch has just received a telegram that the robbers have been arrested.

Can Extend Star Routes Twenty-five Miles.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The Senate to-day passed a bill authorizing the Postmaster General to extend mail routes, at a pro rata of additional pay, for any distance not exceeding twenty-five miles, providing the consent of the contractor be obtained prior to the extension, but no contract can be extended beyond the original term more than once during the original term of the contract.

Definitely Settled.

DENVER, Col., June 10.—Assistant General Manager Kimball and Solicitor Poppleton, of the Union Pacific, left for the east this morning. It has been definitely settled that the Burlington train will have the privileges of the Union Depot, as they commence running all trains about July 1.

Acquitted—Sentenced—State Convention.

COLUMBUS, O., June 9.—Elmer Guion and David Goodrich, the inmates who fired the Asylum for Imbecile Youths, in November, 1881, by which the State lost $30,000, have been acquitted of arson on the ground of insanity.

Fred W. Newburg, the forger who seized $20,000 from the State treasury, and against whom 52 indictments were returned, was sentenced to the penitentiary for 26 years, having pleaded guilty of two indictments only.

The Democratic State Central Committee have decided to hold the State Convention at Columbus, on July 20.

Confirmation of the Tariff Commission.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—In the Senate, Van Wyck, of Nebraska, introduced the following:

Resolved, that in considering the question, Will the Senate consent to the nomination of the persons named by the President to be members of the Tariff Commission? the rules be suspended, so that said question shall be considered in open session and not with closed doors.

McMillan, of Minnesota, reserved all points of order on the resolution, which held it over till Monday.

Chicago Labor Troubles.

CHICAGO, June 9.—Some trouble is anticipated because of the serious interference threatened and even actually offered, by the striking horse shoers—those who refuse to join the union. The union officers pay workmen $10 a week. Many non-union men have acceded to the offer, but employers find no difficulty in filling their places.

Brick makers are once more at work, all yards are in good order, at the compromise of 12 1/2 cents per day advance in wages.

Washington Territory Booming.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—William A. Newell, Governor of Washington Territory, is here looking after the interests of his Territory. He states that emigrants are arriving at the rate of 1,500 per day, and that the Northern Pacific railroad will be completed to the Pacific Ocean within two years. The agricultural and manufacturing interests are rapidly developing.

No Signs of Weakening.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 10.—The iron situation is devoid of anything startling. Both sides remain firm, and preparations are being made for a long siege. The mills are still undergoing repairs, and a number of establishments have sent their horses out to the country for pasturage.

Gamblers Discharged.

CHICAGO, June 9.—All the landlords arrested for renting rooms to gamblers have been discharged, together with nearly all the gamblers themselves, it being said in court that there was no evidence to be obtained that would make a case against them.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

VICTORIA, B. C., June 9.—Late telegrams from Yale state that the water in Frazer river is very high and rapidly rising. The bridges are all swept away, and much damage has been done to personal property. The farmers will lose most of their crops. The high water has caused a suspension of business.

IRELAND.

Another Landlord Murdered.

DUBLIN, June 9.—Walter M. Bourke, a Galway landlord residing at Rahasin, was shot dead while returning from Gorth this evening. His escort was also killed.

ITALY.

"To the Immortal Garibaldi."

ROME, June 9.—The girls of the municipal schools have made a funeral wreath, which Prince Leopold will present at Caprera. In gold letters on the ribbon attached to the wreath are the words, "To the immortal Garibaldi; June 7, 1882."

Garibaldi died with the window of his apartment wide open, and while the sun was setting. Before his last agony a bird alighted on the window sill, where it remained twittering. Garibaldi saw it and stammered, "Quanto e allegro" (How awful it is). It is rumored that, sooner or later, the body of Garibaldi will be brought to Rome. But it is also said that the body will be buried on the summit of Janiculum Hill, where the remains of many Italian patriots shot by the Austrians are buried.

Garibaldi presented his sword to an Englishman after the Tyrolean war, and it is stated that his family will ask its possessor to return it in order to offer it to the municipality of Rome. Colonel Chambers, according to a London dispatch, has offered to return it to the family of Garibaldi, together with the flag Garibaldi had at Montevideo.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

The Mexican Congress has repealed the export duty on silver coin and silver bullion, which has been in existence since the Spanish rule, and which was one of the principal drawbacks to the development of the mining industries of that country.

The Treasury officials state the rumor about the large amount of spurious bonds in circulation is totally false. Folger says they are the idlest rumors, and not a single one has been presented for redemption yet. There are no new developments.

Ex Senator Dorsey does not believe the jury will convict him on the Star Route indictments. He is even now negotiating for the purchase of one of the finest mansions in Denver, Col., for his future occupancy.

Lieut. Danenhower has received information by mail from Irkousk, to the effect that letters from Engineer Mellville, giving the particulars of the finding of the bodies of De-Long and his men, have reached there by courier from Lena Delta. In the memorandum found on Lieut. De-Long's body, and bearing date of October 18, it stated that four of the party were dead and Collins was dying.

Four more British ironclads arrived, at Alexandria, Egypt, on the 8th.

A large company of negroes from Mississippi passed through Dallas, Texas, on the 8th, on their way to Chihuahua, Mexico, with the view of settling there if everything suits them.

Jim Keene's Foxhall won the Ascot gold cup, in England, on the 8th.

A bill has passed the House increasing to $40 per month the pension of any person who in the late war lost an arm, leg, hand, or foot, or received disabilities equal thereto.
