

WOOD RIVER TIMES

HAILEY, IDAHO.

Entered at the Postoffice at Hailey as Second Class Matter.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1882.

If good music was served up at Bayreuth, of other entertainment there appears to have been a notable lack. One of the visitors to the Wagnerian performances writes that guests at the inns and restaurants were unmercifully imposed upon; the prices were exorbitant, and the accommodations wretched. One evening there was a banquet which Wagner spread for the entertainment of his artists, but to which other guests who were willing to pay for the enjoyment were admitted. A considerable number paid their way at this meal, but for three-quarters of an hour they were forced to wait without getting a morsel to eat. Finally they were compelled, in sheer despair, to satisfy their hunger with cheese. Other viands that were set before them were not fit to eat at all. Wagner's conversation was supposed to make up for any defects of gastronomy, but it does not appear to have sufficed for that purpose, for the paying guests were decidedly angry.

The fork has been made the subject of an interesting monogram published in Italy by Prof. Giovanni Lombroso. In the ancient world this aid to eating was unknown, and the fashionable and well-bred sought to display as much delicacy as possible in the operation of conveying food to the mouth with the fingers. It was a thousand years ago when the first mention of the forchetta was made in Italian literature, and it was spoken of as an instrument introduced into Venice by a Byzantine princess. It was at first not favorably received, and for two centuries came little into use, either in Italy or the rest of Europe. No mention of a fork was made in the catalogue of table furniture at the wedding of Maria Sforza-Visconti as late as 1493. Still, the fifteenth century saw it in Germany. It was not until the seventeenth that it was adopted in England.
