A NEW MINING AGENT.

Lime Successfully Used as an Explosive in a Coal Mine.

A few days ago a successful attempt of blasting coal with lime was made in a Hazleton mine, and was witnessed by a number of coal operators, who were well pleased with the result. The use of this new mining agent, it is claimed, will avoid many of the dangers arising from the use of gunpowder, and in addition will purify the air in the mine. The mode of operation is to employ nearly pure carbonate of lime, which after being carefully calcined, is ground to a fine powder. This is conducted to a hydraulic press having a die two inches and a half in diameter, and seven inches deep. A pressure of forty tons is applied simultaneously to both ends of the columns of ground lime, which reduces it from seven inches to four and a quarter, thus nearly doubling its density. The cartridge, after having a small groove cut along its sides, is then ready for use. They are then inserted into the hole drilled into the coal, where they are slightly tamped. Water is then introduced with a force pump, and the steam generated by the action of the water on the lime causes an expansion, which cracks away the coal. The claim set up for this material over gunpowder is economy and time when using it, safety where dangerous gases gather, pure air in the mine, and getting the coal out without blowing it to pieces as is done with powder. It has been tried with satisfactory results in many coal districts in England, Wales and Belgium, and is rapidly taking the place of powder. [Williamsport (Pa.) Gazette.]

A Millionaire's Romance.

There were three romances in the life of the late Joshua Sears, the millionaire grocer of Boston. The first was when he was a poor young man. He started a flirtation with a wealthy beauty on a railroad train, called on her afterward, and finally found out that his suit was in vain, because he was poor and she was rich. The second was when he was past middle age and very rich. He became engaged to a dashing young widow. One of her friends asked her: "What are you going to marry that old fellow for?" "For his money, of course," said she. Sears heard of this. "For my money, eh?" he cried; "not by a blessed sight." He went to his lawyers, and was told she would have a good case in a breach of promise suit. He didn't want a lawsuit, so he handed a confidential friend $10,000 and told him to go and send the widow and "fix things up," which was done, she accepting the bribe and giving him his freedom. The third was when he was an old man. He found himself enormously rich, but thought: "When I am gone, as I soon shall be, who will enjoy it all?" So he went to his friend Alpheus Hardy and said: "Hardy, I'm thinking of getting married. What do you think about it?" Hardy thought he knew a lady who would just suit. "Well, then, Hardy, you go and arrange it." So Hardy conducted the negotiations and Sears was accepted. On his wedding morn the bashful bridegroom called Hardy aside and said: "Hardy, I don't know anything about this ceremony, and you do. So I want you to stick close to my side and coach me so I won't make any thundering mistake." Hardy did so, and all went well. [Exchange.]

Practices in United States Supreme Court, Court of Claims, before Committees of Congress, and in all the Departments of Government at Washington. Obtains patents to all classes of Public Lands, and gives special attention to contests before the General Land Office and Interior Department. Has an experience of eleven years in General Land Office as Chief of Pre-emption Division, Recorder, Chief of Mineral Division, Chief Clerk and Acting Commissioner, and Inspector of Survey of General, and District Land Offices, and one year as Law Officer of Indian Bureau. While not presuming to gratuitously advise, he ventures to suggest, as a result of his experience, that no land contest can be safely conducted by the best lawyers, at remote points; and that the lawyer in a Land District, who has all his ex parte entries—especially of mineral lands—promptly examined on their arrival at Washington, can, by then curing defects, avoiding delay in patents, and being able to accurately, and at all times, inform his clients of the exact status of their claims, gain a positive business advantage over those who permit their cases to drift without direction. In cases where good reasons exist, he will undertake to secure issue of patent in advance of the regular order. All business will receive prompt and careful attention. Refers to Prominent Men throughout the country.
