

WHY THEY WANT TO VOTE.

If I am asked what women want the ballot for, I answer: What do men want it for? Why do the British workmen at this moment so urgently demand it? Look into the British laws regulating labor, and you will see why. They want the ballot because the laws affecting labor and capital are made by the capitalist class alone, and are therefore unjust. I do not forget the progressive legislation of New York in regard to the rights of women. Upon this point, one honorable gentleman asked whether the laws both for men and women were not constantly improving, and whether, therefore, it was not unfair to attribute the character of the laws about women to the fact that men made them? The reply is very evident. If women alone made the laws, legislation for both men and women would undoubtedly be progressive. Does the honorable gentleman think, therefore, that women only should make the laws?—George William Curtis.
