The Knights of Columbus have appointed a history commission which, they announce, will tell truthful American history. The head of the commission is Edward F. McSweeney.

THE CRADLE-ROCKING

FORM OF WORSHIP AT CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY.

Resulted in the Church Later Gaining Much Stronger Hold on the People.

THROUGHOUT Germany, and also Italy and France there has been for some time a widespread use of the "crib." It is now universally diffused in the Roman church. Cribbs are the delight of children who through the season of Christmas and Epiphany wander into the churches at all times of the day to gaze wide eyed on the lifelike scene and offer a prayer to their "Little Brother," as they call the Christ child. The use of the "crib," however, is by no means confined to churches. It is common in many homes both Catholic and Protestant.

There grew up in Germany, about the Fourteenth century, the extremely popular Christmas custom of cradle-rocking, a response to the people's need of a lifelike and homely presentation of Christianity. The crib became a cradle that could be rocked and the worshippers were thus able to express in physical action their devotion to the new-born babe. The cradle-rocking seems to have been done at first by the priests, who impersonated the Virgin and St. Joseph and sang a duet. The people and the choir took part in the singing. In time dancing, which was a natural accompaniment to festive song to the early Germans, became common around the cradle. Eventually the people were allowed to rock the cradle with their own hands. It was by appeals like this to the homely instincts of the people that the church was able to gain a real hold over them, so that during the Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries Christianity became a genuinely popular religion in Germany. Dr. Andre Tille, a well-known Christmas historian, in an article on Christmas in Germany, makes a statement that is most interesting.

"In the dancing and jubilation around the cradle," he writes, "the religion of the cross, however much it might in its inmost character be opposed to the nature of the German people... was felt no longer as something alien. It had become naturalized but had lost in the process its very core. The preparation for a life after death which was its Alpha and Omega, had passed into the background. It was not joy at the promised 'redemption' that expressed itself in the dance around the cradle; for the German has never learned to feel himself utterly vile and sinful; it was joy at the simple fact that a human being, a particular human being, in peculiar circumstances, was born into the world."

Johnny will like the Rudy Furnace because there will be fewer ashes to carry out. Nugent Metal Works install them correctly.

MORNING DOVE A MIGRATORY BIRD, COURT DECIDES

The mourning dove, known in some localities as the Carolina or turtle dove, is a migratory bird, coming within the protection afforded by the Migratory Bird Treaty and the Act of Congress to give it effect, although individuals of the species remain within the borders of certain states the entire year. This decision was rendered in the case of the United States against Joseph H. Lumpkin, brought to trial at Athens, Ga., November 14, before Federal Judge S. H. Sibley and a jury.

The defendant, who was charged with killing mourning doves during the Federal close season, contended that the birds which he had killed had not migrated but had remained in Georgia during the entire year, and for this reason was not covered by the Federal statute. The case which attracted widespread attention, was attended by prominent attorneys of Georgia.

The court held as a matter of law that the mourning dove is protected by the Migratory Bird Treaty, Act, and Regulations, and instructed the jury that the only question of fact to be decided by it was whether the defendant actually killed mourning doves in the close season as charged in the indictment. The trial consumed two days and resulted in the jury returning verdict of guilty and the imposition of a fine of $25 and costs.

The Philosophy of Brother Ostrich

THERE'S something almost human about the ostrich. Rather than face the unusual, he buries his face in the sand—thus exposing himself, rather recklessly, to the whims of happenstance.

Isn't that just like the chap who ducks under the sheets the minute the furniture creaks downstairs?

Lots of folks shut their eyes when they need them most. In the matter of buying something, for instance—the important business of spending hard earned dollars.

Who gets the most for his money? The man who buys blindly—or the fellow who reads advertising and discovers just where he can buy what he wants at the best possible price?

Who is the most economical housekeeper? The woman who buys haphazard, or the one who reads our advertising columns and puts her household purchasing on a business basis?

There's no denying the great value of advertising to those who read it. It protects you against fraud and inferiority. It tells you what is new and good, making you a wise buyer. It saves you money by pointing out for your consideration only the best products and the best places to buy them.

Don't be an ostrich.

Read the advertisements!

not be granted for the sale of such estate;

And it is further ordered, That a copy of this order be published at least once each week for three successive weeks before the said day of hearing, in the Bingham County News, a newspaper printed and published in said City of Blackfoot, County of Bingham, State of Idaho.

Dated this 15th day of November, 1921.
