How long did the seven year war last? What was George Washington's first name? How old was Methusala on his hundredth birthday? What's the price of a ten cent sandwich?

by UNCLE JOHN

In summer evenin's, calm an' still, we used to hear the whippoor-will send forth his plaintive note; we heard the twitter of the frog—the baying of the old coon-dawg,—the gruntin' of the shot. . . . The glory of the summer night, when cricket's chirp an' skeeter's bite, lent spirit to the hour,—delightful in its warp an' woof, the rain-drops on the clapboard roof, grew dreamers full of power. . . . But now, alas! The modern way commences when we hit the hay, an' scorns the midnight bell. . . . We hear the squawks from Timbuctoo—the dismal groans from Waterloo,—the frenzied shrieks from hell! We gather in, all noise that's made,—the devilish rot of every grade—broadcasted through the air. . . . We tune our dingus up at night, and ketch the hymns of hate an' spite, that's let off—everywhere! I used to use a poultice hot, for all the innard pains I got—to draw 'em to the skin,—but I ain't got no keen desire fer rigs that draw without no wire, an' fetch hysterics in!

Yr. warm uncle John.

HOMELY PHILOSOPHY
for 1922

AUTOCASTER

HALF of us don't begin to think before we're thirty-five. We just think we think. When we get to forty we're still fools but some of us know it. We have a right to expect twenty-three years of life. At forty-five we may expect to live twenty years, at fifty we can look forward to sixteen years and at fifty-five, thirteen years and the bell will ring if it don't ring before. Fancy a fellow having thirteen years to live taking time fault findin'. He sleeps half the time. That cuts him down to six and a half years. Chop out holidays, Sundays time for three a day and he's just got time to start what he hopes to finish. Come to think of it, some of us had better quit picking on the other fellow and get on.
