Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the fifteenth (15th) day of April, 1878, an assessment (No. 7) of One Dollar ($1) per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately, in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the company, room 15, No. 310 Pine street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the Twentieth (20th) day of May, 1878, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction, and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Monday, the seventeenth (17th) day of June, 1878, to pay the delinquent assessment, together with the costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

MURDER OF AN AMERICAN LADY.

The Bucharest correspondent of the Edinburg Scotsman writes, April 19, as follows:
A sad tragedy has just taken place here. The sister of the American Vice-Consul, a gentleman well-known and much respected, has been cruelly murdered by a young man who fell in love with her about three years ago. For various reasons the young lady's family refused their consent to the match, although one marriage had already taken place in the family, the lady's sister being married to W. Stladecker, the elder brother of the suitor. After stormy scenes it was resolved that young Stladecker should go to Paris, where he has been staying until the last two weeks.

Returning to Bucharest, he found married to another, the lady whom he loved, and at once seemed to lose his reason.
Going into the room, a few days after his arrival, where the lady and her sister were alone, he commenced upbraiding her, and scarcely waiting for an answer, plunged a dagger into her breast. The wound was mortal, and with one shriek she fell to the floor, her sister trying to shield her from the fury of her assassin, who, unable to strike again to her heart, stabbed right and left into limbs and body, it is said screwing the dagger round in the wounds he inflicted. Then, his object accomplished, he rushed off and tried to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a dagger, breaking it however, and failing in the attempt.

Help coming when too late, the poor lady, who had been but four months married and was only 20 years of age, was laid on a couch. The murderer was also secured and taken to a hospital, and guarded by a gendarme. During the night he made an attempt to escape, which was frustrated, but on Tuesday, the 16th he committed suicide. Saying he was unwell, he was allowed to leave his chamber, followed by the sentinel.
On entering a closet he drew the cord of his dressing-gown off, attached it knotted to a beam above him, and ended his life by hanging himself. He made no noise nor uttered a sound, and was discovered dead when the door was opened.

THE ROCK OF GIBRALTAR.—There is only one hindrance to the Spaniards re-taking Gibraltar from England, as they now desire to do, and that is that it is impregnable. Three of its sides are so precipitous as to be wholly inaccessible, and the fourth side, sloping down to the water, is protected by about 1,000 pieces of artillery. The Moors were finally expelled from the fortress by the Spaniards in 1462, and the latter then greatly strengthened it, and supposed they had made it impregnable, but it was captured by a few British sailors, under Sir George Rook, in 1704, and the most desperate and most persevering efforts have been unavailing to retake it. In 1713 it was confirmed to Great Britain by the treaty of Utrecht. The Spaniards attacked it with a large force in 1727, and in 1779 the assault was renewed by a combined French and Spanish fleet.
This latter siege lasted three years. By June all communication between the rock and the main land was cut off, and the following month the fortress was completely blockaded. The besiegers brought to bear all the resources of war, by land and sea, and their operations were directed by the ablest French and Spanish engineers; a powerful fleet anchored in the bay, and for three weeks an incessant bombardment was kept up from eight mortars and 200 pieces of battering cannon. The garrison made a sortie on November 27, 1781, and destroyed the enemy's works, but the allies soon reconstructed them and brought 1,000 pieces of artillery to play against the fortress, an army of 40,000 the meanwhile besieging it by land, while forty-seven ships of the line and a great number of smaller vessels menaced it by sea. Admiral Rodney having succeeded in throwing relief into the fort by defeating the French fleet, the garrison were greatly encouraged, and, by discharging red-hot shot, silenced the enemy's enormous floating batteries and burned many of their ships. Nine of the batteries were set on fire. About 400 of the crew were saved by the exertions of the British, but the rest all perished in the flames, explosions or drowning; afterward the besiegers were re-enforced but they had only lost sixteen men throughout the attack.

A corpse startled the watchers at the Home of the Little Sisters of the Poor in Richmond Va., one night recently.
An inmate, Mrs. Hillz, had died, and the corpse had been laid out in the parlor of the institution. At midnight as the sisters were watching by the bier, the sunken eyes appeared to flash, the blood came back to the faded cheek, and, as though imbued with superhuman energy, the dead body arose from its resting place, which was draped with black pall. The watchers stared at one another and were overwhelmed with horror and awe. The risen corpse quietly shook herself, and remarked: "I am not dead yet, but I shall die soon." The Sisters after recovering from their consternation, undressed the lady and put her to bed. She became conscious, and after lingering until Wednesday died again.

Graphic: The day after Morrissey arrived in Washington to take his seat in Congress, "Bean Hackman," the champion "dead-beat" of America, accosted him with congratulations and fulsome compliments. "Not bad," said Morrissey, "how much?" Hickman valued it at $5, and received at once his money and his conge.

CREDULITY PERSONIFIED.

The Pitia Indians have all the superstition common to their race, together with more credulity than is generally found in the native Americans. Their relations with the whites have been for so long a time of a peaceful nature, that they have ceased to look with distrust upon their pale-faced brothers. Such, at least, is the case in medical matters.
A strange fact may be cited in this connection. By some means, the untutored savages have been brought to believe that the sex of a child may be fixed at will by its parents before its birth. Indeed, this is still an open question with scientists, but the News does not wish to enter into the discussion at this time.
With the Indians, this belief has been reduced to a settled conviction. They are also unanimous upon the necessary specific for accomplishing the desired object. At one drug store on the Comstock are kept little glass bottles, each containing a small amount of oologne and a peculiar figure representing a baby.
These images are supposed by our unimproved red men to have a powerful effect in determining the sex of the prospective infant. The bottles are purchased by the bucks for fifty cents a piece, and during the time that the squaw is encointe she is given each day a drop of the fluid contained in the bottle. If a son is desired, a bottle containing a figure which looks like a boy is chosen, while the reverse is the case if a daughter is wanted to help in the menial duties and drudgeries around the family wickup. The mother is allowed no discretion in this matter, as the father arrogates to himself the right to regulate all family matters. Of course the medicine fails to work, once in a while, and then the displeasure of the lord falls heavily upon his unfortunate spouse. He never doubts the integrity of the druggist who pockets his cash, but thinks upon some particular occasion the woman has failed to swallow the dose administered. How this practice was originated is not known. It was first started, in all probability, as a good natured jest by some waggish doctor's clerk, and chancing well the first time, was at once received with favor by the aborigines.—[Gold Hill News.

The London Lancet suggests the following simple treatment for felons:—As soon as the disease is felt, put directly over the spot a fly blister about the size of the thumb nail, and let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of the blister, may be seen the felon, which can instantly be taken out with the point of a needle or a lancet. A piece of adhesive plaster will keep the blister in place.

SOME VERY "TALL" STORIES.

"He was the orfullest liar I ever seen," said Cooley O'Leary, as we returned from his friend's funeral. "Why he told me once that he lived on a small island in the Pacific Ocean on which there was a volcano. And he said there was an active demand out in that region for watermelons, so he went into the business of raising them. And he said one year his whole crop failed except one melon, and that kept on growing at such a rate that it crowded him off the low land and up on the side of the volcano, which generated steam and caused an explosion which blew the whole concern to atoms and shot him 400 miles out to sea, where he was picked up by a whaler. He used to tell that the one great mistake of his life was that he didn't drive a plug in the crater of the volcano, so as to make it water-tight, and then sitce open the watermelon and come sailing home on the half-shell."
"He would lie. He said that once he was cast away on an iceberg, with no baggage but a pair of skates and a fishing pole. But he skated around until he came across a dead whale, frozen into the ice. So he took off his shirt—it was night for six months that year up there—tore it into strips for a wick, ran the strips through the bamboo fishing rod, stuck the rod into the fat of the whale, and lit the other end. He said it burned splendidly, and the iceberg reflected the light so strongly that it was almost as bright as day for forty miles around, and one vessel ran into the iceberg, thinking it was a light-house. He said he sold the iceberg to the captain for $15,000, and the captain split it up and took it home and made 200 per cent. profit disposing of it to ice-companies.

"Lie? well sir, he beat any man I ever came across. Told me that once, out in Nevada, a mountain lion attacked him with his mouth wide open. He had presence of mind enough to grab it by the tongue and pull. The lion roared with pain but he done his level best pulling, and pretty soon the tongue began to give and the tail to shorten, and directly out they came the tail and tongue in one continuous string. He said he had 'em at home, and he showed 'em to me, but my belief is they were only three or four cowhides and a bull's tail dovetailed together.

"He was astonishing as a truth crusher. Said he served on a gunboat during the war, which was very small and light, while the mortar on the deck was large and heavy, and he said the first time they tried to fire a fifteen-inch shell the shell remained stationary, while the recoil was so great that it fired the gunboat four miles up the stream and landed it in a tree. He was a liar, but now he is dead I reckon he'll catch it."

Ward Red-fox: We went through the Paymaster Monday last for the first time in many months, and saw about all that was to be seen. The Clay Chamber being our objective point we made for it.
What we don't know about mining would make a book like unto Webster's Un-abridged, but will make the broad assertion that there is not more than one mine in the State that greatly exceeds what came under our observation in the Clay Chamber. From side to side it is all of sixty feet wide, possibly more, but how far it may extend along the lode is a "sticker," for no one pretends to know.
From the level of the tunnel this body of ore has been raised upon almost to the grass roots. The entire mass it is thought will average $75 a ton, and a large percentage will go from $300 to $500 to the ton. It is claimed that the greater portion of this ore can be milled to advantage, which we can readily believe, on account of the presence of antimony.
There are those who still propound the question: "does this body of ore go down?" We suppose it does, unless it takes an airing now and then, cavorts around, stands on its head and resumes its position again before any one discovers it has been on a lark. We suppose it goes some where, and after it goes down several thousand feet it may take a soot under Steptoe Valley and crop out on the other range.

IT WASN'T FATHER.—While several boys were playing the national game on the sidewalk, in Detroit, near a forty-thousand dollar residence, one of them said to the other:
"Say, Bob, your father has struck a legacy, hasn't he?"
"I dunno—why?" was the reply.
"I saw him come out of the gate just now all togged up to fits, and I hardly knew him."
"Did he have on an old plug hat—long hair—rusty boots—coat gittin' shiny on the elbows?" queried the son.
"Not much! He shone like a new pin, and the diamonds almost put my eyes out."
"Ob, you met our coachman, instead of father!" explained the lad, and the next moment he was "knuckling down light" to "plug" a bull's-eye.
