

THE UNCHANGING MINERAL.

For centuries there has been known a curious mineral that issued half wool, half stone. It was found in all parts of the known world, even before the Christian era, and it was found in the new Americas, but in spite of all its widespread fame it was merely a curiosity until within the present century.

The commercial value of any product now depends wholly on its ability to meet certain scientific requirements. Coal will make steam, and steam means light, heat and power. So Asbestos meets certain requirements in the arts that have to do with heat.

Mince-pie season is here, and those who can afford it will now dream of elephants with four trunks and mules with illuminated heads.
