

SINGLE BLESSEDNESS.

A Contented Old Maid Discusses the Marriage Question.

A Few Prominent Hints on the Education of Girls—Marriage a Sad Lottery and, at the Best, a State Full of Cares, Worry and Anxieties.

I have met with very few unmarried ladies who have not appeared to me to feel, after the age of thirty, that their existence was thoroughly comfortless and wretched...

It is of no use to quarrel with the state of society as it is at present constituted, for we can not alter it; but I think it might be beneficial to give a few hints on the education of women...

A girl at thirty is called an old maid. She goes to a ball, and generally sits neglected all the evening, or dance with some gentleman who has been asked often to dine at her father's house...

I will suppose a case in which there are four girls—a moderate proportion in one family—and two sons; and I will suppose their father possesses five thousand a year...

These four young ladies have all been brought up with the idea that they will become wives and mothers, and are taught to cherish these natural affections which, if by some remote chance one out of the four ever does marry...

The heroine is very amiable and perfect, surrounded with admirers, all contending for the honors of her least notice; but where is the novel which represents four poor, pretty, unnoticed girls, who are destined to pass their young years without so much as one admirer amongst them?

This, then, appears to me to be the secret too much neglected in female education. Teach the girls, by all means, that in one great source of happiness consists in the indulgence of virtuous affections; but do not teach them that there is no affection capable of producing this happiness except such as may be felt for a lover or husband...
