

WOMAN'S WORLD.

AN EMPRESS WHO IS A MODEL MOTHER AND HOUSEKEEPER.

Gladstone's Views on French Gowns—Women Draw the Line at Cranky Cranks. Sweet Pickled Watermelon Rinds—Care of Food in Summer.

The Princess Augusta of Augustenburg was a fine looking blond girl with pink and white complexion, splendid physique, a cheerful, unaffected manner and trained in the frugal habits of the ducal court of Dolzig. She was chosen as a possible bride in view of healing the breach between the Holsteins and the Prussians.

The empress rises early and breakfasts with the emperor every morning at 8 o'clock. At 9 she is in the nursery entertaining the baby's toilet, arranging with the nurse for the walks or drives to be taken by the children, and always decides what clothes are to be worn by the young princess.

Peel the rinds with a sharp knife that will take off the green skin evenly. Trim off also every trace of the pink flesh of the fruit, because it is too juicy to make a firm, crisp pickle. Then cut the strips of rind into small pieces 2 to 3 inches long, and placing them in a large earthen dish sprinkle them lightly and evenly with salt. Cover the dish and let it stand overnight.

There are sometimes as many as 50 girls invited to dinner, which is at 6 o'clock and lasts an hour. Beside each plate is a menu printed in German and containing no foreign dishes; also a printed programme of 24 pieces of music about to be played. One servant waits upon two persons, and every little detail of the service is closely watched by the empress.

Until her marriage she had not read a novel. She retains an early habit of writing a few lines every day in a diary which no one sees, and at the end of each year it is locked and put away in the safe with her jewels, and another one is commenced. Her bedroom and sitting room are simply furnished in blue. A large allowance is made to her for personal expenses, yet she makes with her own hands all the birthday gifts for her own and the emperor's numerous family.

Gladstone's Views on French Gowns. The second day of the congress of representative women at Chicago were meetings in full ball in five halls of the great Memorial Art palace on the lake front. But not one of these, nor all of them combined, drew one-sixth of the audience which flocked to Hall III to hear a talk upon dress reform. It was packed to the doors and way beyond.

On this occasion all the leaders of advanced dress reform were present and had something to say. Henrietta Russell was there in a funny dove colored dress, which seemed to fall entirely from her shoulders, but which was becoming to the wearer, although, as a woman who stood just behind the reporters' table remarked, it did make her look as though she had hung a bedspread upon her back and a tablespread upon her front.

Mr. Gladstone told Mrs. Russell that he had for years approved of long lines and Grecian draperies, but had only lately ventured to say so. "The love for French gowns," said he, "with their tight waists and distorted shoulders, is so deeply implanted in the breasts of English women that it is like making a personal attack upon their lives to say that such gowns are not beautiful. For myself I see nothing lovely about them, and I should be glad to see all women dressed in an art robe without a belt or a collar."

"Men's clothes are all wrong too. But I shall talk about that at some other time. Let us now go on with our crusade against woman's dress—corsets, French heels, tight gloves and tight collars."

Mr. Gladstone promised at some future time to give his ideas more fully.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Women Draw the Line at Cranky Cranks. The Woman's Federation of Philanthropic and Christian Societies of the city held its first meeting since its permanent organization yesterday afternoon. A letter from Miss Ada C. Sweet, president of the Municipal League of Chicago, was read. The writer told the women to "particularly avoid putting cranks in the foreground of this work."

This letter was listened to in complete silence and had evidently put some of the equal suffragists who were present to thinking, for at its conclusion one of them arose and asked what a crank was. "I want to know what a crank is," said she. "I am called a crank."

Mrs. Byron Sherry arose and explained that a crank, according to her theory, was one who was ridiculous in the judgment of another person. "It is a test," she said, "of a person's moral and intellectual strength. The saloon keeper considers the temperance woman a crank, the frivolous woman thinks the woman who belongs to a sewing society a crank, and the society woman considers the equal suffragist a crank. All who inaugurate great reforms are called cranks."

It was finally decided that a "cranky crank" should be avoided by the federation, and by this title was meant a person who had a superabundance of zeal without judgment.—Kansas City Times.

Sweet Pickled Watermelon Rinds. Peel the rinds with a sharp knife that will take off the green skin evenly. Trim off also every trace of the pink flesh of the fruit, because it is too juicy to make a firm, crisp pickle. Then cut the strips of rind into small pieces 2 to 3 inches long, and placing them in a large earthen dish sprinkle them lightly and evenly with salt. Cover the dish and let it stand overnight.

Take good elder vinegar for the basis of the pickle. Allow a pound of sugar to a pint of vinegar and add also half an ounce of stick cinnamon broken into inch pieces and a half teaspoonful each of whole cloves and blades of mace. The whole amount of vinegar, sugar and spices used must of course depend on the quantity of rinds to be pickled, but a quart of vinegar is usually sufficient for the rinds of a medium sized melon.

Care of Food in Summer. The food question is often a serious one to the country housekeeper. It is usually within her power to get a good supply of fresh vegetables, milk, butter and eggs, but one cannot be sure of even these things unless they are produced on one's own farm. If the housekeeper must depend upon the marketman's cart for her meat supply, and she is without an icehouse, she must resort to many expedients to provide her family with the necessary variety of animal food.

Charcoal is of great value in keeping ice chests, storerooms and food sweet. Place a shallow dish of fine charcoal in the ice chest. In milkrooms and other rooms where food is kept set dishes of charcoal. If poultry or birds are to be hung in a cool room for a few days, remove the internal organs and partially fill the body with charcoal. Now wrap the birds in paper and hang up. If the outside of the poultry is rubbed with black pepper before being covered with the paper, it will be still further protected from the flies. Small birds, livers, kidneys, sweetbreads, etc., may be wrapped in paraffin paper and then buried in a bed of charcoal.—Maria Parlow in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Minuet Party. One of the recent fads is a minuet party. This has a peculiar effect where fanciful costumes—picture costumes as they are called—are introduced. At a recent fashionable party a minuet was danced by the bride party, the bride and groom leading off the dance. Minuet parties are said to be most conducive to wedding parties, for among other things a minuet party is a charming manner for fostering friendships, almost as good as private theatricals. One reason is the same partner at all the practices, of course, and if a careful selection has been made this is an advantage, as American girls who encourage the idea, even if there be no minuet in question, know well. A great deal in a minuet party depends on the mise en scene. It is not enough to provide pretty faces and graceful dancers. The room should be large and the spectators be crowded as much as possible out of sight. A line of benches set close against the wall is recommended, as it takes far less space than chairs. It must be admitted that they are not so comfortable; still some sacrifices must be made. If a bowlerlike appearance be given to the room by wreaths of evergreen round the cornice dropping down in the corners and round the windows, so much the better.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Midway Plaisance Girl. The Midway girl is attired alike—that is, all of her wear broad, straight brimmed straw hats, with pretty ribbons and a high crown. She has a shirt waist and a pretty tie, sometimes with a butterfly bow, with the ends tucked in. Over this is an Eton jacket, simple and sweet, but mightily becoming withal. She has discarded the trailing gown with the great good sense that characterizes her and has on a plain stuff skirt that clears the ground all around. Her boots and gloves are sensible. The plaisance is a mile long, and there are many things to be handled in the bazaars and round the tables near the great bands, so she is comfortably booted and not gloved with things that will easily.—Chicago Mail.

Are you on to the new walk—the new gait—of the fashionable girl? The paragrapher of the summer girl does not appear to have caught it, but it is here. It beats the Grecian bend or anything the girls have ever yet adopted as their own. It can be best described as a swagger. The head is moved from side to side, the shoulders and the whole body sway, giving exactly the motion a person apparently has who is standing sideways in a boat when the waves are rough. It is a foreign notion introduced last season abroad, and the few fashionable women who are trying it on may think it beautiful, but it isn't. It is technically called "the waggie."—Philadelphia Times.

Mrs. Susan T. Kimball, of Boston, the donor of the Morton hospital building at Taunton, has given $1,000 in memory of her recently deceased son toward a new ward. Her total gift to the institution is now about $30,000.

Women behave in street cars a mighty sight better than they get the credit for. A strong woman yields a seat to one who needs it more. A man looks for a pretty woman to give his to.—Exchange.

The ship left Victoria, B. C., early in December last for London with a large cargo of wheat, and nothing was heard of her until June 22, when she was sighted by the steamer Galileo in latitude 46.31, longitude 35.10, flying signals telling that she was short of food. She was supplied by the steamer, and Captain Whitton brought to New York news of the safety to the underwriters, who were demanding heavy premiums for reinsuring the vessel and cargo.

One of the most sorrowful circumstances connected with the loss of the Victoria is the fact that five out of six engineer officers lost their lives. The reason is not far to seek. The engineers were at the post of duty, and the post of duty was in this case the post of danger. The chief engineer and four of his staff were in the engine room endeavoring to shut off the steam and to open the escape valves. They died, but they will not be forgotten.

Those who know what a watch in the dark, fiery well of the stockhold, 40 feet below the bridge, really means can alone appreciate the qualities which enable men to remain steadfast at their post in such surroundings in the hour of danger. It requires a stout heart to stay at the bottom of an iron well, with a dozen high pressure boilers before one and a square patch of sky seen through a hatchway 40 feet above, when the order on deck is, "Close all the water tight doors," and "Call away all the boats."

Statistics from the Social Register. According to The Social Register for August, the number of prominent families of New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and Chicago who have gone to Europe is only 55 per cent of what it was at this time a year ago. There is also an increase of 30 per cent in the return arrivals from Europe. This is attributed to the World's fair.

The Register shows that 367 families are summering abroad, 2,348 are residing inland, and 2,192 are at the seashore. Of the families that went inland 897 are in New Jersey between Orange and Morristown, 323 are on the Hudson, 97 are at Lenox and 1,833 in New England, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the west. Of those who are at the seashore, 902 are on the Long Island coast, 819 are at Newport, 289 are on the New England coast between Newport and Bar Harbor, 211 are on the Jersey coast between Sea Bright and Atlantic City, 191 are at Bar Harbor and 44 are at Narragansett.
