

To Point the Moral.
You know the story of the boy who began to lift the calf every day, and found that he could lift the cow into which the calf grew. Constant lifting on the side of the world will raise them at last. They put a stone on a squash seed, and found that in growing it would lift enormous weights. It is hindrance that brings out our lifting powers. The sun is the most quiet lifter in creation, and it lifts the most. All heaven comes from outside. All spiritual uplifts in the world come from heaven.

Muster Care for Drink.
Jeremiah O'Leary of the East Surrey regiment was shot during the battle of Colenso, a Manner bullet penetrating the brain. After lying for five hours in the trenches O'Leary was found by the ambulance corps and removed to the base hospital at Pietermaritzburg, where Sir William MacCormac, by a marvelous surgical operation, during which a portion of the brain was removed, succeeded in saving his life. His memory is slightly impaired and he has lost his taste for beer.—London Daily Chronicle.

It is estimated that the national government will get more than $200,000 annually from the collection of internal revenues in Hawaii.

The Trust Problem
To a thoughtful mind is one of serious import, for it creeps upon society before you are aware of its existence. It is this respect much resembling the various disorders which attack the stomach, such as constipation, indigestion and dyspepsia. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the one reliable remedy for all such ailments.

The revolutionists have taken all the cities near the Ecuadorian frontier, including the Papay Tunicos.

The Pinkham Record

is a proud and peerless record. It is a record of cure, of constant conquest over obstinate ills of women; ills that deal out despair; suffering that many women think is woman's natural heritage; disorders and displacements that drive out hope.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures these troubles of women, and robs menstruation of its terrors. No woman need be without the safest and surest advice, for Mrs. Pinkham counsels women free of charge. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

Can any woman afford to ignore the medicine and the advice that has cured a million women?

A King Is Dying.
Albert, king of Saxony, is said to be dying from cancer of the stomach. He is over seventy years of age, and a person appealing strongly to the sympathies of his subjects. His trade is that of his ship, and he has lived up to the noblest conception of this historic profession. He returned from the siege of Paris in 1870 almost as popular a man as Napoleon III. When King John died in 1873 he was crowned to the throne of Saxony. The kingdom at that time was sorely taxed with a war debt of 10,000,000 thalers. The new king's wisdom gradually removed this debt, and his many noble qualities endeared him to the people. The king is childless and will be succeeded by his brother, Prince George. King Albert, according to American notions, is not a wealthy man. He has a civil list of $782,000 a year. His queen, Caroline of Vasa, King Albert's first wife, is a much beloved princess. The king is said to be the only man from whom the old Emperor of Germany would ever accept advice or rebuke. He has often been called the "safety valve," because when the emperor had too much steam on King Albert was always sent for to cool him off. He has lived a cleanly, honorable life, and his death would cause widespread regret.

"Chinese" Gordon.
The present trouble in China suggests the need of another "Chinese" Gordon, who immortalized himself by the suppression of the famous Tai Ping rebellion and in other memorable campaigns. In China, whether he was sent after the rebellion had been shaking the foundation of the empire for several years, Gordon accomplished a task which restored tranquility to an empire whose population outnumbered that of Europe, repaired her desolate cities and gave her toiling millions of peasantry the longest for peace, waiting for which in vain they had ceased to till their paternal fields. They should be but offering fresh temptations to the spoiler. Before Gordon's rule the soldiers paid themselves out of the "boot." Regular pay was now given, and plunder was absolutely forbidden. The officers of the force were not always ready to face their antagonists. Gordon, in his mild way, would take one or the other of them by the arm and lead him into the thick of the fight. He carried no weapon, only a little cane to direct his troops. This cane, which was called his "magic wand of victory," was an object of superstition among the Yal Pings, who regarded Gordon as a being capable of winning battles through witchery. When the troops were under fire he would appear suddenly in his quiet, undress uniform, usually unattended, and always standing in the hottest part of the fire. This picturesque and heroic character was absolutely fearless. He would frequently ride into the enemy's camp alone and unarmed.

MRS. CHARLOTTE M. JEWELL not save them as well as herself would perish with them. We know her character well enough to be sure of that.

Death of Philip.
Rear Admiral John W. Philip, who died at the Brooklyn navy yard a few days since, was a brave, considerate and capable officer; he had served and commanded ships in all quarters of the globe; he had fought in the civil war and the war with Spain, and with the Texas at Santiago he made a record of which his countrymen are proud. But in the years to come he will be identified with the words, "Don't cheer, boys, the poor devil is dying," rather than with any valorous deed of his active naval career. The character of the man was shown in this as in nothing else. He had been in the thick of the Santiago naval battle, his boat had been struck two or three times and victory had finally come to the Stars and Stripes, but even in the enthusiasm of that moment his first thought was for his vanquished foe. Not only did he, in conjunction with the other commanders, give them all the assistance in his power, but he even held in check the rising cheers of his men. Rear Admiral Philip had an honorable career in the navy, achieved well-merited success, and died regretted by all who knew him.

Maes' Great Find.
Sig. Constantino Maes, the Italian archaeologist, has just submitted to his government a memorial in which he affirms that 3,000 bronze tablets, constituting the records of ancient Rome from its foundation to the time of Vespasian, are buried in the marsh at Ostia near Rome. He says that the tablets were carried to Ostia after having been rescued from the fire which destroyed the capital in the year 69 A. D. Sig. Maes wants the Italian government to drain the marsh in order to recover these invaluable records, and a commission will be appointed to investigate the matter.

Cost of the Oregon.
The Oregon is not only dear to the American patriot by reason of her superb history, but she cost a great deal of money, as Secretary Long will spare no reasonable expense in the effort to save her. Her total cost was $6,575,933. Of this total the hull and machinery represent $3,222,510. The ship was commissioned at the Union Iron Works in San Francisco on July 15, 1896, and she has been in commission continuously ever since, an unexampled record in view of her active part in the Spanish war and the enormous voyages.

Capt. McCalla.
Capt. Bowman H. McCalla, the wounded commander of the American detachment with Admiral Seymour's expedition, performed daring and effective service in the Spanish-American war, during which he commanded the cruiser Marblehead at Guantanamo. His landing party shelled the adjacent woods and assisted the force of marines in dispersing the superior force of the enemy. For his conspicuous services he was promoted several files. Since 1899 he has commanded the cruiser Newark, the flagship of the American squadron.

Capt. Wilde.
President Harard of Wellesley College is a believer in athletics for women. She says she thinks the modern, athletic, college-bred girl is thus far the nearest approach to Plato's conception of a perfect woman.

Philadelphia's Splendid Growth.
Exports who have been following the census returns closely state that there will be an increase of population in the city of Philadelphia of from 275,000 to 300,000. Adding the former and lowest estimate to the figures of 1890, which showed the population to be 1,046,984, the grand total population of the city will now be 1,321,984.

ECLIPSES OF THE SUN.
Always an Object of Deep Interest to Astronomers.

The earliest records of solar eclipses are ascribed to Confucius. One of the eclipses of antiquity was famous for two events. One was that it was foretold by an astrologer, the year being 555 B. C., and the second was that his alarming appearance stopped a battle between the Lydians and Medes. Formerly eclipses of the sun created terror among the beholders, and even today educated and intelligent people express a dread of the solemn and impressive darkness. One who has witnessed a total eclipse gives this graphic description: "As much as five minutes before the total obscuration it may be possible to detect strange waving lines of light and shade drawing across the landscape. Then, with frightful velocity, the shadow of the moon is seen approaching, a tangible darkness advancing like a wall, swift as imagination, silent as doom. The immensity of nature never comes so near as then, and strong must be the nerves not to quiver as the blue-black shadow rushes upon the spectator with incredible speed. A vast palpitating presence seems overwhelming the world. Bats emerge stealthily. An assembled crowd is awed into absolute silence. It becomes curiously cold, and the chill is mental as well as physical."

Asked by Her Pet Rooster.
From the Philadelphia Record: South Bethlehem speaks: A woman residing near Springtown, Bucks county, has a pet. The fowl is so big that he can stand on the floor and pick crumbs of the table, and he usually dines with his mistress. Last evening she took from him some article he had picked off the table and resented the act by attacking her. The rooster pecked the woman's face and hands and discolored both her eyes by the terrific blows of his wings.

A Trip's Combination.
The teacher asked her class to put the nouns "coys," "bees," and "beats" into a sentence. The scholars thought intensely for a few moments, when one ragged youngster, with a look of victory on his face, raised his hand. "Well, Johnnie, what is your sentence?" Boys bees bare when they go in swimmin'!"

Abdul Aziz's Physician.
The London Chronicle records the death of an Englishman at Beirut, who was once physician to the Sultan Abdul Aziz, and who is said to have been a relative to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Originally a surgeon in the British army, he entered the Turkish service after the Crimean war, and became one of the favorite medical attendants of the sultan. On the death of Abdul Aziz, Temple was sent into the interior of Asia Minor, and afterwards to Aleppo and Damascus. Finally he came to Beirut, where he died, almost unknown, supposed by the Turks to be an Ottoman subject, for he took pains to conceal his nationality.

A DEAD LIVER

He thinks he lives, but he's a dead one. No person is really alive whose liver is dead. During the winter most people spend nearly all their time in warm, stuffy houses or offices or workshops. Many don't get as much exercise as they ought, and everybody knows that people gain weight in winter. As a rule it is not sound weight, but means a lot of flabby fat and useless, rotting matter staying in the body when it ought to have been driven out. But the liver was overburdened, deadened—stopped work. There you are, with a dead liver, and spring is the time for resurrection. Wake up the dead! Get all the filth out of your system, and get ready for the summer's trials with clean, clear blood, body, brain free from bile. Force is dangerous and destructive unless used in a gentle persuasive way, and the right plan is to give new strength to the muscular walls of the bowels, and stir up the liver to new life and work with CASCARETS, the great spring cleaner, disinfectant and bowel tonic.
