VOUCHED FOR THE BARKEEPER.
Washington Temperance Official Was Put in a Tight Place.
There comes over a certain official in this city a feeling of sadness that his soul cannot resist when he considers the misfortune attending him who seeks to aid his brother man, writes a Washington correspondent.
Last week an individual from Ireland, verdant as the grass of his Emerald Isle, drifted into Washington and besought aid of friends that he might land a position lightly tossing mixtures across the festive bar.
He met a friend, also Irish, and to this friend he confessed his ambition to become a first-class mixologist in the capital of the nation. The friend remembered the official, who is a proper prohibitionist, and called him up over the phone.
"I've a friend just arrived from Ireland," said he, "and I want you as a personal favor to write him a neat little letter explaining that you regard him as an ideal concoctor of mixed bug juice. Take it from me he is. He mixed me a cocktail once that floated me for a week. I know what I'm talking about." So the dear, kind official who never drinks—never, never drinks, mind you—agreed to write for the ardent mixologist a letter of effusiveness that would touch the heart of any barkeep in town.
Toward a business office, where the official and numerous co-workers and the man who hires him were gathered, the man with the ambition wended his weary way.
The official was seated in a calm state delivering an eloquent address on the beauties of lemonade to an appreciative audience, when from without the door came a booming voice, inquiring whether Mr.— was around.
The official looked up on hearing his name called and inquired who desired the pleasure of his company and conversation.
In walked the man with the ambition to mix them for Washington citizens, his genial face aglow with sunburn and perspiration.
"O'm lukin' for a man by the name of Misher—" reiterated the man with the ambition, "are you him?"
"I am he," replied the official, impressively and grammatically.
"O'm the bair-thinder that's lukin' for a letter of testimonial," announced the man from the Emerald Isle.
Somebody snickered.
The official let out a noise like the snort of a wounded walrus.
"My man," he protested, "I—"
"Yes, I know," remarked the son of Erin, "but yes see they told me that if OI could get that letter of recommendation from ye, OI could get a job at any place in town."
The official—the official who never drinks—glared at the apologetic faces of his dear friends, and at the look of mild, and "how could you do it" reproach on the face of the man who hires him, and he turned toward the fatuously happy searcher for a position as dispenser of drinkables.
"Come, with me, my man; come with me," he said, in a slightly choked voice, taking the seeker after a position by the arm.
Together they walked away to a little office, where the official, sat down and wrote the letter. And since that time he has been debating whether he would do best to kill the searcher for a position or the man who got him to write the letter, or both.

FERN A GOOD PRESERVATIVE.
Best Material in Which Foodstuffs Can Be Packed.
Fern leaves excel all other agents for packing articles of food, according to Consul General Guenther at Frankfurt. He has forwarded an article to the state department, of which the following is a summary:
"People who have lived in England know that the English have used fern leaves successfully for many years. Valuable fruit, fresh butter, etc., are no longer seen in the English markets packed in grape-vine leaves, but almost always in fresh fern leaves, which keep the articles excellently."
"This is done where grape-vine leaves are to be had in abundance. Every one posted well in botany knows the high preservative power of fern leaves with reference to vegetable and animal substances."
"On the Isle of Man herrings are packed in ferns and arrive on the market in as fresh a condition as when they were shipped. Potatoes packed in ferns keep many months longer than others packed only in straw."
"Experiments made with both straw and fern leaves in the same cellar showed surprising results in favor of ferns. While the potatoes packed in straw mostly showed signs of rotting in the spring, those in ferns were as fresh as if they had just been dug. Fresh meat is also well preserved by fern leaves."
"It would seem as if the preservative qualities of fern leaves are due to their high percentage of salt. No larvae maggots, etc., approach ferns, as the strong odor keeps them away."
