board of missions of the Episcopal church and so devoted to his work in that capacity that he had declined election as bishop four times prior to being chosen to the post in the Virginia diocese. He decided that this time it was his duty to accept promotion to the higher rank.

Bishop Elect Lloyd is by birth a Virginian and for some years served parishes in the Old Dominion state not far from Washington. He attended the University of Virginia and received his training for the ministry at the Theological seminary near Alexandria, Va. As rector of St. Luke's church at Norfolk he built up an almost dead parish to be one of the strongest in the diocese and interested many young men in its work. From that charge he was called to the mission board.

Miss Jane Addams, who was chosen president of the national conference of charities and corrections at the recent session of the conference in Buffalo, is founder of Hull House, the famous social settlement in Chicago, and is one of the most noted social students of the time. The work accomplished under her direction at Hull House has done much to win respect and influence for the social settlement movement and establish it as one of the greatest factors of the age in social betterment. It is the first time in the history of the national conference of charities, a period covering thirty-six years, that a woman has been at the head of the organization.

Miss Addams, though exceedingly modest and retiring herself, has brought about her at Hull House at one time or another the most brilliant thinkers and talkers of this and other countries. At the long table with its simple fare, where the residents of Hull House break bread after their diverse duties, have gathered, first and last, most persons of original, peculiar or dominating thought of the present time. Some have been refugees, some revolutionists; some have represented the conventions and have been distinguished as achievers of modern forms of prosperity.

Most of the people who live at the settlement do some work to gain a livelihood and choose Hull House as their home for the sake of what they may learn, while giving of what they have. The house itself is a lesson in beauty and simplicity of furnishing. Mahogany and art textures, fine pictures and rare bric-a-brac show the taste of Miss Addams, who furnished the house at the beginning of its history.

Was There Ever An Uncle Sam?

A Query Appropriate to the Independence Day Anniversary - History of the Origin and Development of an Interesting Custom.

THE recurrence of the anniversary of the nation's birth suggests inquiries about many customs connected with its celebration. One of the pictures that the mind frames in thinking of the events of the ever glorious Fourth is that of Uncle Sam doing characteristic stunts by way of expressing his feelings of satisfaction on his natal day. Nobody needs to be told that Uncle Sam is a personification of the American people. But how did it happen the nation came to be typified in this character? One authority gives this definition of the phrase "Uncle Sam": "The government of the people of the United States; a jocular extension of the initials U. S."

This idea is strikingly confirmed in the words of the old song, two lines of which read:

For Uncle Sam is rich enough To give us all a farm, the obvious implication being that the federal government owns—or at the time the song was composed did own—enough vacant land—"government land," as it has been termed—to give every citizen homestead rights.

It was quite natural that the initials "U. S.," standing for United States, should in time come to have a meaning such as they have been given. But it was necessary for the custom to be started in some way, and it is claimed that there was originally a real Uncle Sam. "Fugitive Facts," by Robert Thorne, says: "The practice of calling the United States government 'Uncle

UNCLE SAM.

Sam' is believed to have originated in the following manner: During the Revolutionary war a man named Samuel Wilson was a beef inspector at Troy, N. Y., and was very popular with the men in his employ, who always called him 'Uncle Sam.' After the inspection of the beef it was shipped by him to a contractor named Elbert Anderson and was always marked 'E. A. U. S.' A joking workman, being asked what those letters were the abbreviations of, replied that he did not know unless they were for Elbert Anderson and 'Uncle Sam.' The joke was kept up and spread until it became common to refer to all packages marked 'U. S.' as belonging to 'Uncle Sam.'

"Fugitive Facts" appears to be in error as to the war in question being the Revolutionary war. Evidently it was the war of 1812. There is residing at the present time in the borough of Brooklyn, New York city, a lady who is a lineal descendant of the original Uncle Sam. She says that he was born in New Hampshire about the year 1767, traveled by foot across the Green mountains in 1780 and became one of the early settlers of Troy. In that city one may find today on the Anna M. Plum Art building, Ferry, near Second street, a tablet bearing this inscription:

On This Ground 1780 SAMUEL WILSON, familiarly known as "Uncle Sam," erected

ed the dwelling in which he resided many years. He furnished beef to military camps during the war of 1812. The Troy soldiers called it Uncle Sam's beef. Others, supposing the name referred to the Inspector's mark, "U. S.," gradually applied it to all government property, and "Uncle Sam" came to designate the United States, first throughout the army and ultimately everywhere.

"Uncle Sam" Wilson died in Troy on July 1, 1854, aged eighty-eight years. His old home escaped the fires of 1820 and 1862 and stood until recently.

There died last May in New York city an octogenarian named Sylvester Wells Cone, who was thought to be the living embodiment of the imaginary figure of Uncle Sam, and he took pleasure in posing in stars and stripes for photographers who wished to obtain pictures representing this mythical personage.

Air and Water "Cures."

It is a remarkable fact that, as with various natural so-called "mineral waters," so with various "airs" which people find beneficial, no one has yet clearly and decisively shown, in the first place, whether they exert any chemical effect of a special kind on the people who seem to benefit by drinking the one or breathing the other; still less has anyone shown what is the particular chemical ingredient of the air or of the water of any given resort which exerts the beneficial effect attributed to that air or that water.
