

IN A HURRY.

Mr. Jenkins Had a Contract on Hand After That Shave.

Mr. Jenkins always was in a hurry. It galled him to have to wait for anything. A delay of even a few seconds in getting change drove him into a passion. He always would walk down town rather than wait for a street car if the car was not in sight when he was ready to go. It gave him nervous prostration if the railroad train he wanted to take was five minutes late. But the worst trial of his life was the necessity of having to wait his turn at the barber shop. That he regarded as a clear waste of time. He would try every scheme to get into the shop at a time when no one else was there. Often in desperation he would spend an hour hurrying from one shop to another in the hope of finding one where he would be "next."

Unfortunately, however, his favorite barber was also the favorite of a good many other men, and he often had to bide his time in patience, or rather impatience, though it made a great strain on his nervous system. He started to enter the shop the other evening, and as he peered through the door he saw, to his delight, that the barber at the eleventh chair had no victim. He hugged himself over his unusual luck. His hand was on the doorknob, but just at that moment a woman's scream rang out close at hand. A tramp had accosted her for a nickel for a night's lodging, and when she attempted to brush past him had snatched at her purse. She was clinging to it pluckily and screaming for help. The street was deserted. Mr. Jenkins was the only man around, and he was out of sight in the doorway, which probably had emboldened the tramp to make the assault.

Mr. Jenkins took in the situation at a glance. He was a chivalrous man. His first impulse was to rush to the rescue of the woman, but as he was starting to do so the thought of the vacant chair came back to him. What was he to do? If he stopped to help the woman, so one else might slip into the shop, and then he would have to wait for his shave. He took a step toward the struggling couple, then turned and stepped back the other way. He whirled himself around three or four times in sheer desperation of indecision.

Then a bright idea came to him. Springing into the middle of the sidewalk, he waved his arms and shouted: "Wait just a minute, madam! Please hold on a second or two, Mr. Tramp! I'll be there as quick as I get shaved. I'm next, and it won't take ten minutes. Just postpone your affair till I get through." And with that he bolted into the barber shop, and dropping into the vacant chair exclaimed excitedly: "Double tip if you'll let me out quick! I've got to rescue a lady from a highwayman as soon as I get through here."—Buffalo Express.

No Danger.

This story is told of Mr. Rudyard Kipling, as illustrating very clearly the characteristics of the vigorous English boy who was afterward to achieve such widespread fame with his pen. When a boy of 13, he went on a voyage with his father, who, becoming desperately seasick, retired to his berth, leaving young Rudyard to his own devices. Presently the poor father heard a tremendous commotion over his head, and down the companionway dashed the boatwain, three steps at a time, shouting excitedly: "Mr. Kipling, your boy has crawled out on the yardarm. If he ever lets go, he'll drown, sure." "Yes," said Mr. Kipling, falling back on his pillow, with a sigh of relief, "but he won't let go."—Household Words.

A Squabble of the Past.

The slide was deep and slippery and exceedingly inviting, but still the two boys tugged at the sled and quarreled noisily. "I tell you I'm going to steer!" cried Grover, twitching at the rope. "But you shan't!" yelled David, pulling the sled to his side. "I'll steer myself!" "Boys," called their Uncle Samuel, looking out of the window, "it's a steep, smooth decline. What difference does it make who steers?" And in another moment the whole party was piled up at the foot of the hill in inextricable confusion.—Rockland Tribune.

The Fate of Tantalus.

Mrs. Scribber (impressively)—What ever you do, never, never marry a newspaper man. School Chum—Why not? "I married one, and I know. Every night my husband brings home a big bundle of newspapers from all over the country, and they 'most drive me crazy." "The newspapers?" "Indeed they do. They are just crammed with the most astonishing bargains, in stores a thousand miles away."—New York Weekly.

Next Summer's Excuse.

It was the occasion of the regular weekly banquet of the Ice Dealers' Mutual Benefit association. The dishes had been cleared away and the cigars lighted. "We are now ready, gentlemen," observed the president, clearing his throat, "to transact the item of business the consideration of which is partly responsible for our assembling here this evening." At this point the chairman of the ways and means committee rose and submitted the following: "Whereas, It is necessary that the public should be fully satisfied of the reasonable nature of the rates that will be maintained for ice next summer; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we issue a circular May 15, 1895, stating that the winter of 1894-5 was so phenomenally and exceptionally cold that it was impossible for us to cut ice, except at great personal inconvenience and hardship, and the crop harvested is consequently so short that there will probably be a slight advance on last year's rates."

The preamble and resolution were adopted without a dissenting voice and amid a loud and enthusiastic popping of corks.—Chicago Tribune.

A Phonographic Ghost.

If you sleep in the house of a wizard you must be prepared for experiences out of the common. So thinks a gentleman who once passed a night under Mr. Edison's roof.

In the middle of the night he was awakened by the sound of a voice at his elbow. "Midnight has struck!" it said in hollow but resonant tones. "Prepare to meet thy God!"

The guest was out of bed in haste. He must be the victim of some hallucination. There was no one in the room. His would be a fine case for the "psychical research" people. But even while these thoughts were passing through his head he was making for the door. In the hall he met Mr. Edison, who reassured him by saying: "Don't be scared, old man. It's nothing but a clock."—Youth's Companion.

A Needed Distinction.

She—I think there ought to be some distinctive title by which married men could be distinguished from unmarried ones, as women are designated by "Miss" and "Mrs."

He—Well, a married man might be called "Mr." and an unmarried one "Master."

She—I don't like the word master. It lacks dignity, and, you know, in the old times it was applied principally to persons of low degree.

He—But it is so eminently a proper term.

She—I don't see just why.

He—Of course you do. Don't you know that a man is never master after he is married?—Detroit Free Press.

The Advantages of a Versatile Mind.

The Manager of the Company (at the gallery entrance)—Now, here, you boys, here's a ticket for each of you and 25 cents apiece, and if you don't make a noise like the interior of a cooper shop after every act and applaud the leading lady I'll have the bouncer throw you down stairs. See?

The Same Manager (appearing an hour later before the curtain in response to thunderous applause)—Ladies and gentlemen, I would it were in my power to express my confusion and surprise at this cordial, etc.—Chicago Record.

New Versus Old Ways.

Mrs. Newage—Oh, I am almost tired to death! The New Woman club has been in session all day passing resolutions and drawing up petitions demanding a law regulating the price of bread. Only think! Three dollars' worth of flour costs, when baked into bread, $13. It's outrageous! The bakers must be made to feel the power of the law. You should have been at the meeting.

Old Lady—I was too busy. "What doing?" "Baking bread."—New York Weekly.

Delayed.

Mrs. Pounder—Have you thought out your text for next Sunday, dear? The Rev. Mr. Pounder—No; I haven't had a chance to read the newspapers yet.—New York World.

Confirmed.

Miss Charmante—Do you believe in hypnotism, Mr. De Soffie? Mr. De Soffie—Whenever you look at me, I do.—Somerville Journal.

Cause For Rejoicing.

"Dear me," said Mr. Meekins, "it seems so absurd for men to be constantly talking about their wives having the last word. I never object to my wife having the last word." "You don't?" "Not a bit. I always feel thankful when she gets to it."—Washington Star.

With His Tools.

Mrs. Bingo—I've made a beautiful cake for dinner, and I don't know who to ask. Bingo—Why don't you ask Marbleton, the sculptor?—New York World.

A Hard Case.

Judge—What made you turn burglar? Tramp—I am so fat that people refused to give me food.—Fliegende Blätter.
