GEMS IN VERSE.

A Flight From Glory. Once from the parapet of gems and glow An angel said: "O God, the heart grows cold On these eternal battlements of gold, Where all is pure but cold as virgin snow."

"Here sobers are never heard, no salt tears flow; Here there is none to help, nor sick, nor old; No wrong to fight, no justice to uphold. Grant me thy leave to live man's life below."

"And then annihilation?" God replied. "Yes," said the angel, "even that dread price, For earthly tears are worth eternal night."

"Then go," said God. The angel opened wide His dazzling wings, gazed back to heaven thrice And plunged forever from the walls of light. —Leo Hamilton.

Marc Antony. 'Tis vain, Ponticus! As the half tamed steed, Scouting the desert, lashes madly out And strains and storms and struggles to be freed, Shaking his rattling harness all about, So, fiercer for restraint, here in my breast Hot passion rages, firing every thought. For what is honor, prudence, interest, To the wild strength of love! Oh, best of life, My joy, bliss, triumph, glory, my soul's wife, My Cleopatra, I desire thee so That all restraints to the wild winds I throw! Come what will, come life, come death, to me 'Tis equal if again I look on thee.

Away, Fontenue! Tell her that I rage With madness for her. Nothing can assuage The strong desire, the torment, the fierce stress That whirls my thoughts round and inflames my brain But her great ardent eyes—dark eyes that draw My being to them with a subtle law And an almost divine impetuosity. Tell her I do not live until I feel The thrill of her wild touch, that through each vein Electric shoots its lightning, and again Hear those low tones of hers, although they steal, As by some serpent charm, my will away And wreck my manhood.

Oh, Octavia! This lying galls me, and 'tis worse than vain! Life is too short to waste in love's pretense, In the bleak shadow of indifference. And you—what are you but a galling chain? I hate you that I cannot hate you more; Even hate for you is only cold and dull—Cold as your heart and dull as is your sense. Were you but savage, wicked to the core, Less pious, pruder, saint, made to rule, I might have loved or hated more, but now Nothing on earth seems half so deadly chill As your insipid smile and placid brow, Your glacial goodness and proprieties.

Tell my dear serpent I must see her, fill My eyes with the glad light of her great eyes, Though death, dishonor, anything you will, Staid in the way! Aye, by my soul, disgrace Is better in the sun of Egypt's face Than pomp or power in this detested place! Oh, for the wine my queen alone can pour From her rich nature! Let me starve no more On this weak food! Let me never warm My lifeblood, but away with shams and forms!

Away with Rome! One hour in Egypt's eyes Is worth a score of Roman centuries. Away, Fontenue! Tell her that I see Those eyes I do not live; that Rome to me Is hateful. Tell her—oh, I know not what!—That every thought and feeling, space and spot, Is like an ugly dream where she is not, All persons plagues, all doings wearisome, All talking empty. All these foists and friends, These slaves and courtiers, princes, palaces; This Caesar, with his selfish aims and ends, His oily ways and sleek hypocrites; This Lepidus, and, worse than all by far, This mawkish, pious, prude Octavia, Are bonds and fetters, tedious as disease, Not worth the parings of her finger nails.

Oh, for the breath of Egypt, the soft nights Of the voluptuous east, the dear delights We tasted there, the lotus perfumed gales That dreamt along the low shores of the Nile And softly flutter in the languid sail! Oh, for the queen of all, for the high smile That glows like autumn over her dark face, For her huge nature, her enchanting grace, Her arms, that are away so many a mile! Away, Fontenue! Lose no hour; make sail; Weigh anchor on the instant; woo a gale To blow you to her! Tell her I shall be Close on your very heels across the sea, Praying that Neptune send me storms as strong As passion is to sweep me swift along Till the white spray sing whistling round my prow And the waves gurgie 'neath the keel's sharp prow.

My, ay, Fontenue! When I think of her My soul within my body is set free, My wild blood pulses, and my hot cheeks glow! Love with its madness overwhelms me so That I—oh, go, I say! Fontenue, go! —W. W. Story.
