POETRY.

'If she be gone, the world, in my esteem,
is but bare walls.'
I miss thee sailty love;—though skies are bright,
And birds sing bilthely from o'er hanging trees.
Though dew-drops sparkle in the morning light,
And nature smiles. But what, to me, are thesa!
What Life itself, when thou, its charm, art gone,
And I can feel no bilss it has.

And gave delight, or holy spell to lore? HOLD

"Nay, more; I will promise you an intel-lectual treat into the bargain, for we will extend our trip to Bethany, where you will be compelled to acknowledge, Fmay always find friends, to jub the rust from my mind, when it has accumulated among the sober and matter of fact pursuits of home. We will find there a Patriarch in his modes of life—in his social and moral dominion over the dispositions and habits of his family and dependents—in discharge of the duties of religion, hospitality and benevolence—in the care and control of his flocks, his herds, and his vast estates; but we must also correspond to recounter in him, the we must also go prepared to encounter in him, the sage, the scholar, and the man of the world. We must brush up our acquaintance with books, man-ners, and with men, and be ready to soar into met aphysics; to discuss the practical and useful-to speculate on arts and sciences—nay, even to trifle agreeably, or we will not be companionable to President Campbell at home.

Then, too, there will be Professor P—, with whom we will have our noctes ambrosiana; but we must brighten up our attainments in poetry, belies lettres, and the classics to beguile him into such library gossip, such "Feast of reason, and flow of soul."

as, in happier days, gave zest to our own exist-ence—and lure him, nothing loth, from science, and sober philosophy; rather, I imagine, the em-ployment of his talent, than the pursuit of his tastes; ployment of his talent, than the pursuit of his tastes; and yet we shall find him at home on his farm, familiar with its details, and combining knowledge with industry, in its management. We will look, from his balcony, on the lovely valleys, or, more properly, basin beneath, and around us; of considerable extent, when we reflect that it is the property of one individual—the President,—and but a portion of his possessions—surrounded by loftly lills, crowned with noble forests, rich, during my recent visit, in the variegated tints of Autumn, and he, for a while, forgetful of the tumultuous world from which we appear to be excluded. In short from which we appear to be excluded. In short-for I am afraid you are growing tired—we will im-agine, as we contemplate the quiet hanlet spring-ing into existence at our feet; the tasteful dwellings, and well dressed shrubberies of the Profes-sors, dotting the prominent points of the landscape; and listen to the tinklings of folds, blending hatmoniously, with other sights and sounds, which give embellishment and interest to rural life, that we have found the happy valley of Rasselas, with this advantage in our power, that, instead of the wayward and capricious prince, and the insipid

In the 12th century it was established in France and afterwards in England by John d'Ne-

READERS.—Readers have been divided into four classes. The first may be compared to an hour glass, their reading being as the sand—it runs in and runs out, and leaves not a vestige behind. A second class resemble a sponge, which imbibes every thing, and returns it nearly in the same state, only a little dirtier. A third class may be likened to a jelly bag, which allows all that is pure to pass to a jelly one, which allows all that is put to pass away, and retains the refuse and the dregs. The fourth class are like the slave in the diamond mines at Golconda, who, casting aside all that is worth-less preserves only the pure gem. "Madame, what age shall I put you down?"

"I who made you?" inquired a lady teacher of a lubberly boy, who had lately joined her class. "I don't know," said he.
"Not know! You ought to be ashamed of yourself. A boy fourteen years old! Why, there's little Dicky Filton—he's only three—he can tell, I dure say. Come here, Dickey; who made you?" "Dod!" lisped the infant prodigy. "There," said the teacher triumphantly, "I knew he would remember."
"Well, he oughter," said the stunid boy; "it aint but a little while ago since he was made!"
