—WHEELING VA—

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 6, 1859.

LARGEST DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY, AND WEEKLY CIRCULATION, OF ANY PAPER IN WHEELING.

We were glad to notice at the Hempfield depot in Washington, many evidences of the intimate business connection which is forming between that borough and county, and this city.

We were also glad to have from many of the leading men, assurances that their business relations with Wheeling were constantly enlarging, and what was better still, that they were of a highly satisfactory character. We were, by the testimony of our eyes and ears, firmly impressed with the belief that the value of a careful and liberal husbandry of the trade of the great county of Washington, as far as it can be reached by means of the Hempfield road, cannot be too highly estimated. The trade of Washington borough itself is a great item, and according as we multiply our sales to that town do we extend them indirectly to the very doors of the farmers who live out North, North-east and North-west of that place. A county like Washington, possessing a population of near or quite fifty thousand, chiefly of farmers, owning small, well cultivated farms, and numbering within its limits some dozen or more towns, must necessarily have a most valuable aggregate trade.

The Hempfield road is the main outlet of all this trade. It reaches from the western border to the centre, which ought to give it a direct radial North and South of its line, and East of its terminus, of a dozen miles. For instance, all the country lying between the road running from Independence, Pa., to Washington ought to be supplied direct by the flow of trade along the Hempfield; and so, likewise, should the country lying South between the Greene county border and the road. And so, indeed, of the country between the Monongahela river and Washington.

Our grocery trade has already made commendable headway within these boundaries. Indeed it has, we may say, occupancy of the territory, and has divested, within a few months past, we are told, a trade, from former sources of supply, worth upwards of fifty thousand per annum. This is well—but what we are equally desirous to see is, these sections drawing to them supplies of articles of our manufacture. For instance, we should like to see our glass go there more than it does. And there is no reason why it does not. Fine cut glass, such as we manufacture, cannot be had anywhere this side the mountains; yet an inferior article, we find, is bought and supplied from other sources by the trade up there. Then, too, all sorts of our Foundry ware has, as yet, made but a limited demand for itself. And so we might go on and specify other articles of manufacture, which need only to be pushed a little to find for themselves a highly valuable market in this region of country. The first step is, of course, to bring these articles fairly and favorably before the trade, which can be done, primarily, by advertisements in the local press, and in such other papers as circulate largely there.—[Among the latter, we modestly suggest that the Weekly Intelligencer is a most excellent medium.] The next step is to make our prices an inducement. And this, our manufacturers tell us, they can do. So, then, we may say that we need but to make known thoroughly and efficiently our inducements to have them appreciated. Speed and cheapness of transit exist in our favor, and it only remains for us to stretch out our arms and avail ourselves of the advantages which our natural position entitles us to.

The report of Sir Moses Montefiore to the Committee of Deputies of the British Jews, on the subject of his mission to Rome in the Mortara case, has been published. There is nothing very interesting in the document beyond the fact that the mission has hopelessly failed of its direct object. Sir Moses, as the representative of the British Israelites, was received with all respect by the high officers of the Papal Government, and was favored with the countenance and assistance of the diplomatic representative of France, but the only response which the delegate could obtain to the memorial of which he was the bearer, was that the case was closed and could not be reopened.

The police entered a gambling house in Philadelphia the other night, and arrested several people who were trying their luck. Others escaped, some by the window—and one fellow named Kerrigan jumped right into the pen of a black bear. A local says that he escaped with his life, owing to two circumstances—first, that the bear had long been tamed, and was deflected by such appalling screams; and secondly, that the animal had been too well brought up to bite anything so largely saturated with bad odors as the Milesian in his grasp. The bear got a whiff of Mr. Kerrigan's breath, and dropped him like a bad oyster.

The New York critics "cut up" Edwin Booth savagely. They say he has no finish, &c., and his "details" are condemned, though not specified, as follows:—"Mr. Booth's details are all of the old conventional schools—gestures, which suggest deformity, and even the old short-jacket costume, which gives a man the appearance of having been run through a saw mill, and made a narrow escape with the loss of his clothing." This is good. Edwin will heed and improve—quit details and short jackets, and forget his conventional schooling.

VIRGINIA STEWART, of N. Y., still lives. The physicians are astonished at her existing; by their books she should have been comfortably buried some time since.

That Letter from Governor Wise.

We published yesterday a telegraphic synopsis of a letter from Gov. Wise to a gentleman in New York, puffing his chances for the Charleston nomination. The telegraph jumbled the matter badly, destroying much of the sense of what was meant, owing to bad punctuation.

Here is the letter as it comes by the mails, in full:

Richmond, July 13, 1859.

DEAR SIR—I thank you for yours of the 8th inst. I have apprehended all along that the Tammany Regency would carry a united delegation from New York to Charleston. For whom? Douglas, I know is confident, but you may rely on it that Mr. Buchanan is himself a candidate for renomination, and all his patronage and power will be used to disappoint Douglas and all other aspirants. Our only chance is to organize by districts, and either whip the enemy or send two delegations.

If that is done or not done, we must still rely on a united South. A united South will depend on a united Virginia, and I pledge you that she at least shall be a unit. Virginia a unit, and persistent and firm on a sound platform of protection, to all persons of popular verve squatter sovereignty, she must rally to her support all the South. The South cannot adopt Mr. Douglas's platform. It is a short cut to all the ends of black republicanism. He then will kick up his heels. If he does or don't he can't be nominated, and the main argument against his nomination is that he can't be elected if nominated. If he runs an independent candidate, and Seward runs, and I am nominated at Charleston, I can beat them both. Or, if squatter sovereignty is a plank of the platform at Charleston, and Douglas is nominated, the South will run an independent candidate on protection principles, and run the election into the House. Where, then, would Mr. Douglas be? The lowest candidate on the list. If I have the popular strength you suppose it will itself fix the nomination.—Get that and I am confident of success.

Non. F. Wood is professedly and really, I believe, a friend, and of course I would, in good faith, be glad of his influence, and would do nothing to impair it, and could not justly reject his kind aid; but you may rely upon it that I am neither completely, nor at all, in the hands of Mr. Wood, or of any other man who breathes. He has always been friendly to me, and I am to him, but always on fair and independent terms. There is nothing in our relations which should keep aloof any friend of either. He knows as well as any one can tell him, that his main influence is in the city of New York, and I judge what you say of his country influence is correct. But I am counting all the time without New York, and don't fear the result. I am depending solely upon open position of principle, independent of all cliques, and defying all corners. We will overwhelm opposition in Virginia, and her vote will be conservative and national.

At all events, I shall always be glad to hear from you and am, yours truly,

HENRY A. WISE.

It will be seen that this letter is dated on the 13th ult., while Mr. Buchanan's letter of positive refusal to be again in the field, was written on the 25th; so that as far as Mr. Buchanan is concerned, the Governor's vaticinations fall to the ground.

But aside from that part of his hallucinations, does not the whole thing strike everybody as most supremely ridiculous. Gov. Wise is and has been acting, for a long while back, a part that will, we believe, disgust everybody familiar with it. The Richmond Enquirer has come to be a sort of puffing sheet for him. Letters containing the most fulsome praise of his qualities for the Presidency appear there by the column, and seem to have conspicuous preference over all other kinds of matter—save, perhaps, the personal cards of his belligerent son.

We candidly believe that but a very meagre number of people either meditate or particularly desire Wise's nomination at Charleston. He is not the material for a President, being altogether too erratic and visionary even if he had other important qualifications which are wanting. We, therefore, think that it would be a saving of decent respect if Wise would leave off trying to impress his availability on the mind of the nation. It certainly, we think, will be a relief to the readers of the Richmond Enquirer when he is disposed of in some definite shape.

Of the bathing at Newport, a correspondent of the Providence Journal writes:—"The bathing this season is charming, and hundreds, thousands relish and enjoy it. From morning till night the bathers are seen in the surf, for which they seem to have the strongest attachment.—By eleven o'clock the fashionable crowd take possession of the little boxes, called by courtesy bathing houses, into which many fair forms enter, to come forth in a few minutes, strangely disguised and in most unique apparel. Think of several hundred of these fair ones, some of them with forms that Helen might have envied, dancing in the surf and toying with the breakers, which clasp them in their rude embrace as they rush on to the shore, where, dying for very joy and pleasure, they murmur still an unending song of love and tenderness."

Who wouldn't be a horse? The stables in the Fifth Avenue, N. Y., are described as very luxurious affairs—built of brick and free-stone, with much architectural display, lighted with gas and supplied with Croton water, with large and roomy stalls. In one, owned by a wealthy banker, lately a foreign minister, are half a dozen splendid coach and saddle horses, a beautiful Shetland pony and a cow, half a dozen dogs, and some Guinea pigs. Everything about the place is kept as neat as a pin, the horses are littered with fine hay, occupy large, airy stalls, and seem highly to appreciate their home comforts. The whole interior of the stable is handsomely painted. In the coach house are three or four rich, heavy coaches of European manufacture, and an American phaeton.

The large majority in the English House of Commons in favor of the "Church Rates Abolition Bill," on the thirtieth of the present month, is one of the most marked of recent indications of real progress in England. The vote is conclusive as to the opinion of Parliament, that a compulsory tax for the maintenance of the edifices belonging to the Established Church ought no longer to be enforced.

GREENWOOD CEMETERY, near New York City, was founded in June, 1849, and from that month up to the 23d ultimo, 69,040 bodies took up their residence in the silent city. Greenwood will in the end outstrip New York, and ere many years will count its dead by millions.

Individuality—The Sure Index of Greatness.

[Selected for the Intelligencer.]

Now, this faculty of expressing one's self in his works is what generally constitutes the difference between excellence and mediocrity.—Unless, indeed, a man is so varied and many-sided in his art, that, like Shakespeare or Goethe, he sympathizes with all mankind, and shares "all thoughts, all passions, all desires, whatever stir this mortal frame;" unless his genius or his intellect towers away into the region where so few enter, and beneath which all humanity is mapped out to the vision, as the kingdom of the world once was to the Son of Man; unless the artist belongs to the first class of minds, he must, if he hopes for greatness, embody and unobscure that which is most within him; he must express himself on canvas, in marble, in words, in melody! The writer without individuality may be elegant and elaborate, but his thoughts breathe not, his words burn not; the painter may learn the rules of his art, but if he cannot embody a fancy or an imagination that shall distinguish him from his fellows, none will look twice at his canvas; the actor, even, can play only those characters that present in some sort a resemblance to his own. Only those who have been able to incarnate themselves in their works have exerted a lasting or a wide spread influence. Artists must infuse this individuality into their efforts, or the salt will lose its savor.

Question for Financial Men.

How is it possible for several persons to be at the same time, and for the same sum of money, at once debtor and creditor to each other?

ILLUSTRATION.

Mr. Danderly had a son and a son-in-law.—The son-in-law was very curious to know whether his parent-in-law was altogether easy in his circumstances, and whether his extreme economy arose from avarice or necessity.

In order to discover the truth, he requested from Mr. Danderly the loan of fifty dollars.—Mr. Danderly, who really was extremely short of money, but not at all inclined to let his son-in-law discover it, replied to his request, that he would oblige him with pleasure, but that first he must change a larger bill, as he had not so small an amount at hand; and if his son-in-law would wait an hour, he would bring him the money.

Off hurried Mr. Danderly, and in order to accede to the request of his son-in-law, applies to his son for the loan of fifty dollars, but without saying a word of the circumstances.

The son, who, like his father, is altogether moneyless, but anxious to oblige his father, also conceals his inability, and begs him to wait for only half an hour, as he must get a locksmith to remove the lock from his desk, he having most unfortunately lost the key. The son then hurries away in his turn, and in order to help his father, (but without mentioning his request,) applies to the son-in-law for the required sum, which he immediately obtains.

Then he hastens with it to accommodate his father, who as quickly hurries to oblige his son-in-law with the requested loan; and thus, each one of the three become at the same time debtor and creditor for the same fifty dollars.

CALIFORNIA ORATORY.—The San Francisco Fourth of July orator, Mr. John V. Watson, wound up in the following "thrilling" style:

"But if the time shall unhappily come when this mighty fabric shall yield to the perniciat attacks of evil discord, I pray God that its fate may be oblivion, that no wreck or vestige of its existence may remain to attest its former greatness or incite the story of its fall. Let the Atlantic and the Pacific meet in a mournful embrace over its ruins, and their commingled waves sing its requiem."

The crops in the South, West, East and North, are larger in every production of the earth than they ever were before. Cotton, Rice, &c., at the South, Grain at the West, Hay and Vegetables at the North and East, and so on. The excess of Wheat in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, this year over last, will be at least 74,000,000 bushels.

A TRAVELLER in Spain writes—I have seen the Queen at Arranjuez, and never in my life was so agreeably disappointed. She does not in any one feature resemble the wretched portraits of her stamped on the Spanish coin, or painted in so-called portraits—she is a fine looking woman, and it pleased me very much to see her in mourning for the King of Naples!—because black becomes her.

The Alta Californian gives the following recipe for the cure of neuralgia: Half a drachm of sal ammoniac in an ounce of camphor water; to be taken a teaspoonful at a dose, and the dose repeated at intervals of five minutes, if the pain be not relieved at once. This is believed to be the most effectual remedy ever discovered for this most painful malady.

A man in Wisconsin, a Prussian, named Lentzgen, was foolish enough to drown himself, and mean enough to leave a letter charging it upon his wife, who, according to his account, was a shrew. A great many women, remarks the Providence Journal, "are liable to that objection, it is one of the risks that a man takes, but we never heard that a woman was improved in that respect by her husband drowning himself."

POWERS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.—Scholars speak of the English language as in itself a power. No people have spoken it, or can speak it, but a powerful people. No other language equals it. With a law and genius of its own, it levies contributions upon all other languages, and incorporates the power and beauty, the heart and core, of every other tongue, into it.—For perspicuity and force, for elegance and smoothness, poetry and science, metaphysics and theology, the pulpit or the forum, the senate or the bar, for any and every use, there is no language which equals it. By the use of this common language, our country is bound together by a common sympathy; and by the same means—unity of language—we are allied to the most powerful nations of the earth. The English language is rapidly spreading into all lands, and will, according to present indications, soon become the language of commerce in all nations. The English and Americans are in the East Indies, in Australia at the Cape of Good Hope, on the coast of China; in Asia, Africa, Europe and America; on all continents, seas and islands; along all lines of travel, where they find or leave some who speak the language. The English language has a veritable power of expression, such as, perhaps, never stood at the command of any other language of men. Its highly spiritual genius and wonderfully happy development and condition, have been the result of a surprisingly intimate union of the two noblest languages in modern Europe, the Teutonic and the Romanic. It is well known in what relation these two stand to one another in the English tongue; the former supplying, in far larger proportion, the material ground work; the latter the spiritual conceptions, in truth, the English language, which by no mere accident has produced and upborne the greatest and predominant poet of modern times, as distinguished from the ancient classical poetry (I can, of course, only mean Shakespeare) may, with all right, be called a world language, and like the English people, appears destined hereafter to prevail with a sway more extensive even than its present over all the portions of the globe. For in wealth, good sense, and closeness of structure, no other of the languages at this day spoken deserves to be compared with it, not even our German, which is torn, even as we are torn, and must first rid itself of many defects before it can enter boldly into the lists as a competitor with the English.—Jacob Grimm.

To the Be-Drugged and Poisoned Citizens of Wheeling and Vicinity.

You are overrun with a deluge of the vilest compounds in the form of "Alcoholic Drinks" that ever emanated from that pest of society, the LIQUOR MIXER. They are sold to you as a luxury, or they are dispensed to you as a Medicine, and in either way the effect is the same.

There is but one way to escape, and that is to use, as a luxury or a medicine, a safe and reliable stimulant, sold under stamp and seal, which renders certain that it has not been tampered with. Such an article is which is distilled under inspection of the British Government, is delicately flavored (unlike any other Gin) with some of the most valuable restoratives of the Vegetable Kingdom, and is by far the most healthy beverage extant.

THE MOST EMINENT PHYSICIANS OF EUROPE AND AMERICA not only recommend its use by the hale and hearty, but prescribe it as a medicine where a stimulant is required.

THE FEMALE SEX will find it not only a pleasant Cordial, but a certain relief in sufferings of a nervous character.

ANALYTICAL CHEMISTS of ALL RANKS pronounce it perfectly pure, and its restorative merits incomparable.

Wheeling Female Seminary.

ELL. EMISSION.

THIS Institution, under the superintendence of Mrs. S. K. Hanna, has risen to be one of the foremost schools in the country. It has grown in interest, usefulness and public favor steadily, until now it is believed by its Board of Trustees, that it presents attractions to parents and guardians abroad such as few schools anywhere in the West can claim. The academic regime adopted and carried out has been the result of the carefully matured plans of a corps of efficient and experienced teachers, and every department of the course has been so thoroughly systematized that it is believed to be a great advance upon any other variety of course, and every grade of preparation among pupils, as well as the number of advantages in point of health, accessibility and general convenience to boarders, as any school known to its Board.

The academic year is divided into two sessions of five months each. The first session will commence on the first Wednesday of September, and will close on the last Thursday of January. For terms, &c., or any additional information, see Catalogue, which may be had at this office, or on application to any one of the undersigned.
