CIRCULATION, OF ANY PAPER IN WHEELING. WE have before us a little book on Geology. No department of learning has, in modern times, met with so sudden and general a revival as has that of Geology, within the past few years. We say revital, because Geology is not t hough brought into its present state of advancement in late days, it was yet taught and some very correct ideas had on the subject in very early times.

That it is a science of very great importance must seem obvious to every one. Not only does it develop, in a most wonderful degree, the great works of creation, but it opens out vast resources of material wealth,-thus adding largely to human prosperity and happiness.

The chief objections which Geology, as a science, has met, are that some of its leading principles are in direct conflict with the teachings of Divine Revelation. To the casual eve of the unreasoning and unlearned, such a conflict does seem to exist; a very serious obstruction is thus placed in the way of its progress .-But, notwithstanding this seeming discrepancy, Geology has still pushed its researches, and as greater lights are thrown upon it, apparent contradictions vanish.

At one time, most stubborn opposition was made to the new system of Astronomy, then introduced, which taught that the earth moved on its axis, and that the Sun did not move around the earth. Was not the "rising of the Sun," and "the going down of the same," expressly mentioned in the Bible? Are we not told that, "God laid the foundations of the earth that it should not be removed, forever?" How then could the Sun be stationary, or the earth moveable? Such were the arguments brought by unlearned readers of Revelation, and it required many years to prove that no conflict between Astronomy and the Bible existed.

Just so with Geology and the Bible. Apparent contradictions present themselves, but it is at last coming to be seen that no contradiction, in fact, exists, and that the Bible may be believed consistently with a belief in the principles of Geology. Let us look at some of the examples of apparent discrepancy: According to the account of Moses and the writers of the Bible. it has been not quite 6000 years since the creation of the world. Geologists, however, claim that the changes which have taken place in the world have required countless years. Yet this discrepancy may be reconciled on several reasonable grounds. By the six days of creation may not be meant six literal days of 24 hours each; and there are strong arguments to show that such was not meant. The explanation, however, which is most generally adopted by Geologists, contains in it nothing either absurd or contrary to Scripture, and entirely reconciles Science with Revelation. It is, in brief, this: Moses first relates the original creation. He then passes over a long period of time, during which the races of animals (whose fossil remains are the proof of the great age of the world) lived and perished, and then relates the history of the existing creation, which took place in six

Thus may every other seeming difficulty be solved. But, it will take some time yet to enlighten the world sufficiently to eradicate the groundless phjudices against this newly revived science. Learned men must not be discouraged because ignorant ones declaim against their benevolent efforts, for in the end knowledge will prevail over want of understanding, and [Geology (as Astronomy has) will prove itself to be the handmaiden, instead of the emomy of the Bible.

WE have, from a Mr. T. Hewson, of Canada, a pamplet on the best and cheapest mode of indurating railroad timber, so as to preserve it from decay. The modes in use are too expensive for such enormous amounts of timber as railroads use, and his object is to suggest a cheaper system. His plan is to construct a wooden tank as deep as the length of the timbers to be treated, and large enough to hold 100 sills or ties placed butt end down in it, and after the sills are properly placed, to fill it with pyrolignite of Iron, which drives out the sap and preserves the wood. A tank that will hold 100 ties of 7 feet long, only costs $70, and can be moved from place to place as may be found handiest for use. Seven days' soaking in this solution added 84 pounds per cubic foot to the weight of some specimens of timber thus

Some days ago, in a piece of raphsodical tirade, the younger Democratic paper declared that Senator Caldwell was elected by the votes of "the pure unamalgamated Opposition."

A few days thereafter it stated that he was elected as "a Whig Senator?"

Yesterday it declared that "he was elected not as a party man, or through party feeling, but on account of a local issue connected with the Panhandle road."

The editor seems to set a high estimate on the good sense of his readers. We should judge that he had been a student of the "Asinine papers"-which have for their motto-"Ego sum asinus, tu es asinus, ille est asinus, sunt omnes

Two BIOGRAPHIES have just appeared, which we recommend to our readers, as books which deserve the rare praise of being suggestive. One is Goethe in Weimar, a little volume which pretends to be no more than what it is a series of sketches of the great king of German literature during the calm years of his later life. Nothing could be more charming than these quiet, delicately painted pictures of the quaint little German city of Weimar, and the simple home life of the masters of song and philosophy whom the good Duke Karl August assembled in his court. We lay down the book with the conviction that we have actually been there, have partaken of the peaceful vet homely hospitality of the ducal court, have talked with Wieland in his ivy-hung study, reverently knelt in the little church where Herder preached sermons which all Europe echoed, entered the theatre in the narrow street, for which the greatest poet of Germany wrote plays, where a science of recent origin, as some suppose; for Goethe himself was manager; read the inscription upon the door of the humble house which is now a sort of German Mecca, viz: "Here Schiller dwelt, and wrote his Song of Joy." We finish the description of the little town and its inhabitants with the feeling that we have been among the giants who dwelt in the land, or like the adventurous Knight in the old Norse Saga, who entered the quiet house of the gods and saw them in their home-life, saw the place where the lightning and thunder was made which was to lighten or to shock the world. A life of Goethe has long been a desideratum in literature. We saw, lately, a suggestion that Carlyle should supply it. From that biography may Providence deliver the land! Carlyle, though perhaps the most profound of English thinkers, knows but one trait in any character worthy of being noted .- Force of will. All other characteristics are to him but trifling accessories. The possession, or the want of that, makes or unmakes the man in his judgment. He is blind to all else. A life written by him of a man with a character of such infinite developements as Goethe's would be like a picture of the rainbow in India ink. To write a true life of such a man would require a grasp of thought as wide and powerful as his own, for he rises from among the crowd of the inspired prophets of the world of Thought-like Saul among his brethren, the god-given crown upon his forehead. His works are a study in themselves; the study, we may say, of the history of humanity in its progress from a youth of gro ping, pain and unrest, to the clear full sunshine of perfection. To write this history was Goethe's mission into the world, and to perform it, he looked into his own nature and saw there reflected, as in a mirror, all human character and powers: A peculiar nature, unique among men. An imagination and creative power which only Shakspeare can rival; a logical capacity of Titan strength, a capability of love, and hate, and suffering, of an infinite depth, and over all, (the point that constitutes the peculiarity of the man and his real strength,) a certain critical speculative eye of reason, that looked coolly down into the vast intricate workings of his own strength, into the passionate struggles of his heart, and calmly noted them down, a lesson for all time. In this, lay the power of the man, when his disciples denominate the "Only one"-the "microcosm among men." Hence, as we before said, his works, are, with all their magnificent display of power, their unestimated variety of subject and diction, a series of pictures by a master's hand of the history of the common mind of humanity. They remind us of Raphael's cartoons, where the same face appears in innumerable changes of landscape and costumes .-We can trace his progress from that dim cry of suffering attered in his youth, the embodiment of all the impatient longings, the vague passionate desires of happiness and love of a young heart, to the last grand work of his calm, full old age, when "eternal sunshine had settled on his head." In that last work, Wilhelm Meister, he has solved the enigma of life, has learned the one lesson taught by its dreamiest nights of pain and by its days of flashing sunshine, to work for the Right in profound calmness of spirit "like a star, without baste. and without rest, each one fulfilling his Godgiven tack." "One thing there is" he says, "which alone can make a man, a man-Reverence; and that the gaining of that three fold reverence is the history of our lives First, reverence for what is above us, natural to children and to nations in their earliest stages-the Pagan religion; reverence for what is around us, the free frank nature of the man, which draws proudly to himself, all things above and below, the Philosopher's religion; and last and highest, the reverence for what is under us, to recognize poverty and suffering, pain and death, the divine-and honor them-the Christian religion." In this brief comprehensive resume of his own experience, he taught that of the world. We have neither time nor space to notice the other book to which we referred, The Life of Heyne. We may do so at some future time.

THE luminous young man who runs the Times, (in the ground,) bursts the fetters and scatters the conventional usages and trammels of language like a load of manure. He says that we profess principles in a hidden way."

Look into your dictionary, O! you ruthless Solecist! and see that profess means "to make open (not hidden) declaration of."

"ARE you assessed?" is now the question that our exchanges in Pennsylvania are asking every day of their readers. To-morrow, Friday, is the last day on which they can be assessed in time to vote. Big times up in old Dutchland fore long now.

THE younger Democratic paper wants to know whom the Intelligencer will support for the Presidency in 1860.

Most likely the Wheeling nominee. Who'll be supporting you, about that time?

THE American Bank Note Company have made a contract to furnish plates and bills, exeworld, but it appears there is one on the Isle of cuted in the very best style, for the National Wight, England, which is 72 feet 6 inches in Bank of Greece. Bank bills in the land of Socrates and Plato!

A WRITER in one of our exchanges is engaged in the rather profitless task of commenting upon and exploding many of the old adages to which began. First the adage, "All's Well that Ends Well," is set down as simply nonesense, for, says the writer.

An innocent man may be hung, and find himself in heaven; yet we are of the opinion that it is not well for a man to be hung, though ne does get to paradise, in consequence, soone han he otherwise would; for his family will be disgraced, and, lacking his protection, may suffer the pains of poverty. It may be said that, such a case as the one last supposed, the man's earthly end was bad; but how could hangng be a bad thing for him-according to the dage-if thereupon he enters into glory!

The truth of "Faint Heart never won Fain Lady," is admitted, but it is contended that many a fair lady has won a faint heart and made it strong:

And sometimes a strong heart has broken on ccount of some fair lady, who wasn't worth a ingle throb of the faintest kind of a heart hough strong hearts seldom break of love, but f an excess of bitterness.

We are of the opinion that a lady, fair or therwise, who cannot be won without extraorlinary exertion or pertinacity, can never be won Love goes where it is sent and cannot be forced in any direction.

"A Bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," is summarily disposed of by saying that the truth of this depends altogether on the character of the "bird in hand" or those in the bush.

The "bird in hand" may be a detriment whereas two, or any number of the same kind, in the bush, are "nothing to nobody," unless some one is fool enough to seek them

Dr. Jourson once said, that he never felt so atterly, and hopelessly at a loss, so perfectly paralyzed and helpless, as when he once took up fiddle, and essayed to make a decent sound come out of it. He added that a man could do many things well, without having been previously instructed at all, but that no man who ever existed, could play all at once, even in the slightest degree upon the fiddle. It is very nuch so with the Caldwell organ. It canno produce a decent sound, such music as we are ow getting from it, would exasperate even the Its latest effusion, or discovery, is, Choctaws. that we did'nt vote for Mr. Caldwell .- Times of

We cull the above as a curiosity, and as a specimen of the "inimitable Prentician style" n which the younger Democratic Organ "points moral and adorns a tale." In explanation, and as sort of guide to its peculiarity, we may say that the beginning and ending of the story of Dr. Johnson and his fiddle, and the application of it to us, is contained entire in the above elip. We submit the point, pith, pertinency, brilliancy and perspicuity of it, to a discrimi-

THE Liverpool Times, in announcing that the Prince of Wales, in company with the Colonial Minister, will probably visit Canada at the opening of the Victoria Bridge, remarks as

We wish, for the sake of the Canadians, that ner Majesty would undertake the journey. She eems to be a good sailor, from the frequency of her journeys in the royal yacht, and a voyage across the Atlantic would be nothing to one accustomed to the cross currents of the channel. Being on the American Continent, she could hardly escape a visit to New York-perhaps to Washington-and the result would be in every way gratifying to all concerned.

THE foreign correspondent of the N. Y. Comnercial writes-"The fact is, Napoleon is too elever for John Bull-and if a collision should ver happen between these powers, I very much believe Napoleon's navy and army will prove to be the most formidable also. You will, in my opinion, find in two years' time that he has everything in readiness to send forth upon the sea quite as many guns, if not more, than England; and as for sailors, he can muster more in thirty days than she can in four months."

---A correspondent of the New York Express, who recently paid a visit to the Bank of En gland, says: "There was one item which I learn ed from the bank, decidedly gratifying to my national pride. Not a single piece of American paper which laid over during the late panie now remains unpaid. This, says Mr. Elsev, the Governor, cannot be said of any other na-

A New York man has recently patented a saddle tree of which the peculiarity is that it adapts itself to the different sizes and shapes of the different horses on which it is used. This is effected by a "bridge" between the two flats of the tree, at the "hollow," and dispenses with the "head" which joins the two portions in what makes the pommel of the saddle.

Something New, True, Intelligible and Important FOR THE CURE OF THE SICK ELECTROPATHY.

S. D. JONES, M. D. has taken rooms at the Beymer Bloase, and tenders his professional services to the sick and afflicted of Wheeling and vicinity, for a careful diagnosis, and treatment of all diseases of a Chronic or Nervous chareter. He brings to his aid a new application of the charcter. He brings to his aid a new application of the most powerful of all agents, ELEDTRIGITY. Dr. J. would here state that he is not introducing a system based upon uncertainty or doubt, but one at all times reliable and has been tested by thousands. His especial claims are as follows: First, In determining the condition of the body or an organ by an electric disgnosis, which points out the character and locality of the disease. Second, The specific action of electricity on the body. Third, The distinctive influence of the two polarities, the inward and the outward; and lastly. The selentific application of the two polarities to diseased states of the body, treating each state according to its requirements, and the fixed laws which govern the action of electricity. When these principles are understood and as the state according to its requirements, and the fixed laws which govern the ing to its requirements, and the fixed laws which govern the action of electricity. When these principles are understood and strictly carried out, it is no matter of doubt or guesswork, and the ability to cure no mystery.

The following diseases are especially and permanently cured:

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Stiff Joints, Pulmonary Consumption, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Paralysis, Catarrh, Asthma, Piles, Ulcers, Tumors, all Skin Diseases, Spinal Curva-

ed Eyes, Palpitation of the Heart,
Contracted Muscles, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Ague, Typhoid Fover, Deafness, Fits, Dropsy, St. Vitis' Dance,

tures, Weak and Inflam-

ALL DISEASES INCIDENT TO FEMALES. The above diseases are under the especial control of the electrical agent, and never fails in any reasonable case to effect a permanent cure. All shocks and irregular currents are avoided, which tend to excite and irritate the Nervous system, producing a smooth and mild sensation to the most

Those suffering from the above diseases and have falled to obtain relief from all other means should not fail to call and witness cases pe formed by this most powerful agent. Difficulties of years stan ting are sometimes removed in a single application. Dr. J. would say that from long experience, he is enabled to prescribe Homopathic remedies with great certainty, for the care of diseases for those who wish a mild and safe medication. He will visit the sick at their residences if desired. THE FINEST PLAVORED CIGARS in the city is to L. found at Washington Hall Drug Store, for sale by sept15 8. PUNDENBERG.
