VACATION TIME.

"I bet teacher feels sorry she won't see us for more'n two months!"

BARNSTOWN.

Many people of this town went to see the dog and pony show on the Atha addition last evening.

A very quiet wedding took place July 13 at the residence of Rev. Talbot at Barrackville at 8 o'clock, when Miss Hazel Wilson became the bride of Mr. Clem Satterfield, popular young people of this place. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Nease, sister and brother-in-law of the bride on their return to the home of the bride, where they found quite a large crowd assembled. After many happy wishes they retired to the dining room, where the table was spread with delicious fruits. After refreshments music was rendered by Mrs. Nease. They received many valuable and useful presents for their lives be long and prosperous.

F. J. Hess has returned to his work at Barrackville, which will be completed this week.

Miss Della Wilson returned this week from Uniontown, Pa., where she has been visiting Miss Nellie Swiger.

Not much news in this part of the town just at present but if some of our good citizens watch around I think they can raise an excitement pretty soon, as they are always on the alert. So no more.

WOMEN IN AUSTRALIA

Emancipation of the Sex Denounced As Dangerous to the Country.

From the Chicago Chronicle.]

Australia has furnished the world some lessons in man's tendency to fly off the tangents and run into extremes that ought to be valuable. Among these have been the fact of the loss of a million population within the time since the labor unions have had virtual or actual control of the country—loss, that is to say, through emigration of workers unwilling to surrender their individuality to the unions. Along with this development of unionism in labor there has been noteworthy expansions in what it has been the fashion to call "the emancipation of woman." With this is said to have come increased disinclination in the sex toward marriage and a serious falling off in the birth rate among those who marry.

Against such a condition reaction was inevitable, and the reaction was sure to be unreasonable in something like the same degree as were the causes for it. There is nothing surprising, therefore though there is much that is discouraging, to find in one of the journals published in Sydney the following expression of extreme views in an antagonistic direction: "An intellectual woman," says this editor, "is an abnormality; she has the brain of a man in the body of a woman. Intellect in woman has so dazzled us by its brilliance that we have failed to recognize it as a disease, like genius in man and the pearl in an oyster. But nevertheless it is a disease, and must inevitably be the death of a race in which it is fostered."

This is, of course, an extreme of reaction. It is, as such, symptomatic of the diseased condition which has spread in modern times and has borne fruit in action in England's remote colonies especially, but is also noticeable among us. It is not intellectually in woman or man that is, in itself, abnormal. It is its development along with neglect to develop the sense of moral responsibility.

The cure is not in reducing the patient's intellectual activity, but in restoring her balance of character. Men need something of the same curative process.

Only sailing vessels are bothered and delayed by "calms." The steamship does not have to wait for a breeze. And in the business world only the store that does not advertise (or that does not advertise enough) is bothered by "dull days."

If you have real estate to sell it is the poorest time of the year to be quiet about it—and the best time to advertise it; for a large number of buyers are watching the day.

The want ads. are "the bees of publicity"—and they are harnessed at your service.
