CENTRAL FEMALE COLLEGE, LEXINGTON, MISSOURI.

The Eighth Scholastic Year of this School Begins MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1876.

Rev. MARSHALL McILHANY, President, Assisted by a Full Corps of Competent and Experienced Teachers.

The BOARD OF CURATORS take great pleasure in being able to place this College before the Church and the Public, at this time, as worthy of their confidence and patronage.

The President elect is a man of very decided ability and qualifications, with many years of experience in the management of female schools. He comes to this college endeavoring by the confidence and prayers of the entire Church in the State, and is known as an experienced and able educator. His connection with the College is expected to be permanent.

The Teachers selected in the Literary, Musical and Art Departments have been tried and approved. Nothing, therefore, will be wanting on the part of the Faculty to ensure thorough and successful teaching.

Lexington is situated on the high bluffs of the Missouri river, in the heart of a most beautiful, healthy and fertile part of the State, has a population of about six thousand, and is noted for its churches and schools, and its beautiful handiwork must be pleasing and refining to the minds and hearts of the young ladies who daily behold them.

The College buildings are now undergoing a thorough renovation and repairing from the ground to the roof, nearly every room being newly papered and painted—the main front also repaired and newly painted. The furniture also will be renovated and repaired, and such additions of new furniture as may be needed will be made.

The fences enclosing the grounds, which are beautifully set in blue grass, are being repaired and made new, and, with all the out buildings, handsomely whitened. Nothing will be left to be necessary for the comfort and pleasure of the young ladies attending school. All these with the naturally beautiful situation, commanding such magnificent views present a home for young ladies which must tend to elevate and refine.

The financial outlook is more encouraging than for several years past and we think the time has come when our people can afford to send their daughters from home to complete their education.

We are determined to make this College worthy of your patronage, and a home where your daughters can be educated and polished. It shall not drag for want of money. We need courage, zeal, ability, industry, hope and faith, with a progressive spirit. These elements are necessary for the new President, and we believe that a new light has dawned upon us, and we look for the future of our College to be upward and onward. We ask you, therefore, to send us your daughters for education, feeling sure that you will be satisfied and they greatly pleased.

The terms, vacations, expenses, regulations and charges will be substantially as heretofore, and such as are usual in these institutions.

MRS. GRIMFORD'S DAUGHTER. Mrs. Grimford sat in her own room, as usual, in the fastening of her dress, when she was startled by a knock at her door.

"Oh, I'll help her!" cried Sydney, springing up, and pulling Mrs. Grimford by main force up the step side of the rock.

"Ah, cried the lady, it is very steep. I really think women should devote more time to gymnastics. Oh, here's the apartment—very choice specimen of my way, Sydney, where are you going?" she suddenly cried, seeing Mr. Wilmer had sprung back into the room.

"Only for a little turn, madame, while you are collecting your botanical treasures."

"Something has happened!" cried the prophetic soul of Mrs. Grimford. "Oh, if I should have to stay here all night!" She looked nervously around.

"But, indeed, madame," pleaded Carrie, "it isn't nonsense. He really wants me to marry him."

"A woman who marries," continued the strong-minded matron, "is a doer. You are not a doer, Sydney, and you are not a doer, Carrie."

"Do, child—do!" ejaculated Mrs. Grimford. "That is a pretty question for my daughter to ask! Why, Sydney, you are a doer, and you are a doer, Carrie."

"Well, madame," said Sydney, in accents of the coolest liberation, "I am a doer, and you are a doer, Carrie."

"Oh, course I did. I had some honor about it if I could have got off this place."

"And that condition is," said Mrs. Grimford, "that you shall be a doer, and you shall be a doer, Carrie."

"I am a doer, and you are a doer, Carrie," said Sydney, in accents of the coolest liberation, "I am a doer, and you are a doer, Carrie."

OSTERS' LAST FIGHT. BISMARCK, DAKOTA, July 6.—In a recent dispatch I informed you that Custer expected to meet the Indians and give them battle on the 24th. As stated, he left the mouth of the Rosebud on the 22d with 15 companies of the 7th Cavalry, striking the trail where Reno left it, leading in the direction of the Little Horn, a branch of the Big Horn. On the evening of the 24th, scouts reported fresh trails, and on the morning of the 25th he was at Indian Village, twenty miles above the mouth of the Little Horn, about three miles long and half a mile wide, fifteen miles away. Custer pushed his command rapidly through. He had made a long march, in all 78 miles, in the twenty-four hours preceding the battle, and when the village struck an abandoned terrace. While the Indians were moving in hot haste to many camps, Custer with seven companies of the 7th Cavalry, was ordered to the left to attack the village at its head, while Custer, with the remainder of the regiment, commenced a vigorous attack. Reno felt of them with three companies of cavalry, and was surrounded by the Indians, and after an hour or more of desperate fighting, during which the Lieutenant Colonel, George A. Mott, and several Indian scouts killed and many wounded, Custer pushed his command across the river and gained a bluff 300 feet in height, where he entrenched and was soon joined by Colonel Benteen, who had been ordered to meet him. The Indians resumed the attack, which had abated in vigor for a moment, and Custer, with his desperate charges, which were repulsed with great slaughter to the Indians. They gained higher bluffs, however, and Custer, with his desperate charges, which were repulsed with great slaughter to the Indians. They gained higher bluffs, however, and Custer, with his desperate charges, which were repulsed with great slaughter to the Indians.
